WASHINGTON NEWS.

Conclusion of Mr. Ames' Testimony on Credit Mobilier.

Singular Proposition from Judge Black, McComb's Counsel.

Liability of Postmasters for Letters Registered in their Offices.

Probable Action on the Geneva Award Bill Before Recess.

Mr. Brooks' Position Among Democrats Impaired.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The examination of Oakes Ames was concluded today before the Credit Mobilier Committee. It is reported that Mr. Ames has told a very frank story to the Committee regarding his operations with the stock; that he has given, with great particularity, the transaction with each member; that he has furnished memoranda of dates, amounts, and occurrences; that his testimony will show that some members took the stock at the price demanded, and paid for it; that others declined to take it, that still others took it, held it awhile, and then sold it back to him; that one or two have received dividends upon it, and that, in his judgment, they had a right to buy it and to receive the fruits of their investment. The Committee then permitted Judge Black to cross-examine Mr. Ames, and there was some very sharp sparring for over an hour. Mr. Ames kept his temper better than was supposed, and he retaliated upon Black by exposing a proposition of the latter, made last Saturday night, that if he (Ames) would admit that he held this Credit Mobilier stock in trust for McComb, this investigation could be discontinued, and the reputations of several parties saved. It will probably transpire that many members named in the original list were offered stock, and that nearly all of them held that they had a right to buy it if they were able, but that not more than two or three did make any investments of that character.

THE LIABILITY OF POSTMASTERS.

A very important decision has recently been made at the Post-office Department. The Postmaster-General has decided that all Postmasters are liable to the Government for the value of all registered letters lost in their offices. This principle, which has been long maintained with respect to minor offices, has never been applied to offices where any considerable number of letters has been registered. It is now claimed that the bond of Postmasters covers such case of loss. It is insisted by those who oppose this ruling that the bond does not cover such cases; that inasmuch as the Government disclaims all liability for the loss of such letters, even that of an ordinary common carrier, the Postmaster is by no means liable to the Government for a loss which the Government does not sustain. There is eminent legal authority against the liability of Postmasters for such loss. The definite establishment of such a principle will render the responsibility under Postmasters' bonds much greater than has been supposed.

The House Committee on Post-offices and Post-roads overruled the ruling of the Postmaster-General relative to double postage upon unprepaid matter, and decided that such a construction of the law was strained. The Committee will to-morrow report a bill in accordance with such decision.

THE CHEROKEE NEUTRAL LANDS.

The morning hour of the Senate was spent in discussing a bill which, according to the speeches in opposition, might be called an act to reward certain people of Kansas for squatting on the Cherokee neutral lands, in violation of law, and being legally ejected from the same. The bill did not pass, though, with some amendments, it is likely to become a law, as there is admitted to be a basis of justice in the claim.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF SENATOR DAVIS' DEATH.

The announcement by Senator Stevenson of the death of his late colleague, Garrett Davis, of Kentucky, was followed by eulogies from Senator Matches, (Mr. Davis' successor,) Messrs. Thurman, Trumbull, Bayard, and Sumner. A resolution expressing the respect of the Senate for the memory of Mr. Davis was passed, and the Senate adjourned. On the communication of the resolution to the House, brief speeches were made by Messrs. Beck, Adams, Arthur, and McHenry, of Kentucky, Banks, of Massachusetts, Poland, of Vermont, and Wood, of New-York. At the conclusion of the speeches the House adjourned.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

The President was at his room in the Senate wing of the Capitol a short time this afternoon. His visit attracted considerable attention, but is said not to have had a very important object. It is rumored, however, that he desires action before recess on the bill to distribute the Alabama claims award, and that he prefers that the Courts rather than a commission should determine the claims. This would allow of appeals wherever the Government or any claimant might feel that injustice was done in the decision of the first tribunal.

THE PASSAGE OF THE DEFICIENCY BILL DELAYED.

The House sought to finish the Deficiency bill, today, but the captious opposition of the Democratic members prevented. The several votes taken show that the appropriation for the District of Columbia, which is the feature of dispute, has a clear majority of 30 to 35 votes. A motion to reduce the amount from $1,340,000 to $740,000, was lost by 20 majority.

VENTILATION OF THE SENATE CHAMBER.

The Chief Engineer in charge of the heating and ventilating of the Senate Chamber has written a letter to the architect of the Capitol, which has been referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, in which he asks an appropriation of $10,000 to extend by means of a tunnel the inlet for fresh air about 200 feet from the Capitol, to the lower terrace, in the West Capitol Park. The engineer states that this work is needed on account of the present defective situation of the inlets. When the wind is in certain directions, counter currents carry the coal gas from the boiler flues down to the inlets, whence it is drawn into the Chamber. With this improvements nothing more would be desired in the ventilation of the Senate wing of the Capitol.

THE COTTON TAX.

Hornblow V. Johnson, of Georgia, will soon, perhaps, to-morrow, have a hearing before the Ways and Means Committee of the House in regard to the refunding of the cotton tax.

MR. BROOKS' AND THE CREDIT MOBILIER.

There is a good deal of dissatisfaction on the Democratic side of the House with Mr. Brooks' account of his Credit Mobilier relations. Some of the more prominent Democrats express surprise that he was not able to make a clearer exhibit of his innocence of the published allegations against him. It is cruelly intimated that Brooks suffers from the jealousy of Democrats who are displeased that the distribution of the stock had not been more general on that side of the House.

BILLS SIGNED BY THE PRESIDENT.

The President has signed the act for repairing, furnishing, and ornamenting the United States Custom-house and Post-office at Bath, Me.; the act for the removal of disabilities of L. Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi; the act for the construction of bridges over the Ohio River, and prescribing the dimensions of the same; and the act authorizing the issuance of college scrip to the State of Arkansas.

GEN. BLAIR'S REASON.

A letter from Francis P. Blair, Sr., will appear in the Chronicle, to-morrow, correcting the statement of that journal today that Gen. Blair was so seriously ill as to leave little hope of his resuming his seat in the Senate. Mr. Blair says this report is circulated to affect Gen. Blair's election, and he gives extracts from late letters of Col. Guest, Gen. Blair's neighbor and friend, saying the General is much better, and that his case is steadily and rapidly advancing.

THE REVENUE MARINE.

The United States revenue cutter Hamilton has been ordered to Boston, to take the place of the Mahoning, which is withdrawn for the purpose of having new boilers supplied. The Mahoning will perform the Winter cruising in that section in the meantime. The cruising grounds of the revenue steamers Grant, at New-York, and the Colfax, at Baltimore, have been extended so as to cover the Hatteras left vacant by the withdrawal of the Hamilton from Philadelphia.

GREAT FIRE AT FLUSHING.

Five Buildings Demolished to Stay the Progress of the Flames—One Man Killed and a Boy Seriously Injured.

A very destructive fire occurred last night at Flushing, Long Island, by which a large amount of valuable property was consumed, and which was also attended with loss of life. The fire was discovered at about 10 o'clock, in Clemens & Bloodgood's grocery store, and raged with much ferocity. Despite the exertions of the firemen, it extended to the adjoining buildings, and then assumed such a threatening aspect that the firemen were compelled to demolish five frame buildings to stop the progress of the flames. Assistance was called for from Hunter's Point, and the officials of the Flushing and North-side Railroad at once dispatched a platform car to Hunter's Point for fire-engines.

During the burning of the buildings, a chimney fell, and buried in the ruins one man, who was almost instantly killed. An unknown boy was seriously injured at the same time. The greatest excitement prevailed among the people, who feared a general conflagration. At midnight, the fire was raging with intensity. The loss to property could not be estimated at that late hour.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Passage of Concurring Resolutions Censuring Senator Sumner.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 18.—The resolutions condemnatory of the course of Senator Sumner, in introducing a bill into the United States Senate to remove all inscriptions relating to the rebellion from the Army Register and national regimental flags, came up in the House of Representatives this afternoon, and, after a short debate, the question was taken on a motion to indefinitely postpone the resolves by yeas and nays, but this was lost by a vote of 82 to 95, and then the resolutions were passed by 104 yeas to 78 nays.

They were taken up in the Senate this afternoon, and a warm debate took place, in which most of the Senators took part, when the motion to indefinitely postpone was lost, by a vote of 14 to 18, and then the resolutions were passed, twenty voting in the affirmative and nine in the negative.

Fasting and Prayer to Prevent the Spread of Small-Pox—A Clerical Lady—Revision of the Territorial Laws.

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 18.—To-morrow has been appointed a day of fasting and prayer in St. John's Valley, Tooele County, that the Almighty may be merciful and prevent the spread of small-pox there.

A lady is preparing to occupy the pulpit in one of the orthodox churches of this city.

A division of opinion prevails among the Gentiles as to the wisdom of calling an extra session of the Territorial Legislature to revise the laws. Those in favor of it state that the Mormons would have a chance to correct their errors; while those against it hold that compulsion only will bring about the abandonment of polygamy, and that an extra session of the Legislature will avoid nothing, but merely defer a remedy through Congress.

SANITARY VIGILANCE.

Important Recommendations with Regard to Small-Pox.

A Corps of Vaccinators to be Organized for Immediate Action—Interesting Report Concerning Adulterated Food.

At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday, a number of important matters were considered. Chief among them was the subject of small-pox.

Dr. E. H. Janes, City Sanitary Inspector, announced that there were twenty cases reported last week. The number for the corresponding week in 1871 was fifty. Of the twenty cases, fourteen were vaccinated in infancy, three were never vaccinated, one inoculated seven years ago, one three times vaccinated unsuccessfully. Six of the cases have been traced to those previously reported.

The following important report in regard to small-pox was presented by the Sanitary Committee to the Board:

The Sanitary Committee respectfully call the attention of the Board to the fact that the prevalence of smallpox in this City depends upon two—The constant increase of unvaccinated infants among the poorer classes; and, second, the arrival of unprotected immigrants. The first source of danger is by far the most important. It is ascertained that not less than 35,000 infants are born in this City annually among the poor. Very little attention is paid to vaccination either during the prevalence of smallpox or at any other time. In consequence there is a constantly increasing number of unprotected children, until they reach a given percentage of the population, when, as at present, it becomes epidemic, and epidemic of greater or less severity is the consequence. The history of the domestic scourge in New-York for the past fifty years shows that, in the ordinary course of events, it is endemic every three years, when it ceases for the prevailing unprotected either take the disease or are vaccinated, and, as a result, at the end of the period there are few or no unprotected persons left in the City. The following are the results annually but isolated cases of smallpox; the second there is a limited increase, but during the third, fourth or fifth years an epidemic again appears. There can be no doubt as to the fact that such a source of danger can and can be prevented. If no child were allowed to pass its sixth month without being properly vaccinated, the material for small-pox would be so limited as to cause and so widely scattered that only isolated cases would occur.

In the opinion of the Committee, it is a most important duty that the Board should, by the power and means will permit, the vaccination of all unvaccinated children and imperfectly vaccinated adults, at least twice in each year. Authority is no law making vaccination compulsory, but it is apparent it has been contemplated; and only be effected by personal visitations and persuasion of the vaccinators. For two years prior to the 1st of May last vaccination was carried on by the Sanitary Inspectors all parts of the City and among all classes. This work was done under a constant pressure of small-pox, which was epidemic in many parts of the country, and which, fortunately, failed to obtain a foothold in the New-York. The records of this Department show that upward of 200,000 persons were vaccinated by the Health Inspectors, and it is safe to conclude that equal number were vaccinated by private physicians, dentists and at the various dispensaries. By this means New-York was saved from a destructive epidemic, while other cities, where vaccination was neglected, were severely scourged.

It is an important fact that so uniformly was vaccination by the officers of this Board successful, that popular prejudice was almost entirely allayed, and persons, the most intelligent, sought, at much inconvenience, to be vaccinated by Health Inspectors.

In view of these facts, the Sanitary Committee are of the opinion that a corps of vaccinators should be appointed, and the districts of the City occupied by the poorer classes should be thoroughly canvassed, and gratuitous vaccination should be offered to all who are unprotected. Since May last, but little precaution has been taken in this Department, owing to the disappearance of small-pox. Meantime, it is estimated that upward of 17,000 infants have been born, and thousands of immigrants have taken up their abode in the tenement-houses. While it is not believed by the Committee that small-pox could become epidemic for a year or more, owing to the exhaustive vaccination of the entire population which has been made during the past two years, yet it becomes a matter of vast importance to the future health of the City that this preventive measure be so applied as to render an epidemic of small-pox impossible. And this can be effectually accomplished only by semi-annual house to house vaccination by the officers of this board. As the season is very favorable for small-pox, and as there is at present in this City, and epidemic in neighboring cities, the Committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the City Sanitary Inspector be and is hereby directed to organize, with the advice of the Sanitary Committee, a corps of vaccinators, and so distribute the work as in an economical manner, to secure the early vaccination of all persons thus unprotected.

G. CECCARINI, M. D.,
STEPHEN SMITH, M. D.,
MAGNUS HOLM, } Committee.

The report was accepted, and the accompanying resolution was unanimously adopted.

ADULTERATION OF ARTICLES OF FOOD.

A communication from Prof. Chandler, the chemist of the Board, in regard to the adulteration of articles of food, was received and ordered on file. It sets forth that he had found that the samples of powdered sugar, purchased at various stores, was altogether free from any intentional or accidental adulteration; Saleratus was found to be slightly adulterated with flour and common salt. Cream of tartar contained sulphate of lime to such an extent that in many cases it predominated. Various specimens of baking powders were of the ordinary degree of purity.

Yesterday the Sanitary Committee reported adversely to the application of the New-York Rendering Company to melt fat and lard at their works foot of West Thirty-eighth-street, by a new process.

The application of Superintendent Thorne, of the Street Cleaning Bureau, to dump ashes on the vacant lots adjoining Corporation ground for a few days, was returned without action, as they have no jurisdiction in the matter.

Mr. A. J. Vanderpool, the attorney and counsel to the Board, tendered his resignation. No action was taken thereon.

The Sanitary Committee presented its usual report of work done for the past week.

The following tabulated statement is furnished by the Registrar of Records:

A Desperate Encounter with a Panther.

From the Portland Oregonian, Dec. 6.

A professional hunter, named Repps, was out hunting this week on Martin's Island, down the Columbia. The hunter was accompanied by a young hound only, which started some animal a little distance away in the dense brush. Repps ran from the stack timber in which he was standing, toward the edge of the water. A clear space of several rods divided the brush and the river margin. On reaching the bank, Repps halted and placed himself in an attitude of defense. In a few minutes, the hound sneaked from the timber and came running toward his master. Immediately following the dog, and at hot pursuit, a large and ferocious panther bounded in sight. Repps raised his gun to his shoulder and fired. The ball took effect in the jaw of the animal, but did not inflict any serious injury, nor retard its advance toward the hunter. On firing, Repps retreated into the water up to his arm-pits. The wounded and infuriated animal sprang after and "tackled" the hunter. The dog came to the rescue of his master, and made it so warm for the panther that it abandoned Repps and turned on the hound. Repps waded out toward the bank, turned around and fired the second barrel of his gun at the panther. The load was large buckshot, and took effect in the panther's side. The wounded was very severe, but did not entirely disable the animal, which was getting behind some of the brush, by this time the panther would soon be drowned, and was resolved to rescue it if possible. He then discharged both barrels of the gun, and cut aside his large bowie-knife in the core of the timber when he started to recover it in the water. No time, however, was to be lost, and Repps sprang into the river to save his hound. By this time the panther had lost much blood, and was growing weak from exhaustion. The hunter was a powerful man, seized hold of the panther's hind, and, after a three "round," broke its hold on the hound. The panther now turned on Repps. A long and fierce encounter ensued between the hunter, panther, and the dog. At last Repps succeeded in keeping the animal's nose under water until it was quite dead, after which he drew the body to the shore and saunted from his wounds and exhaustion. The hunter was severely lacerated in the conflict, and has scarcely been able to leave his bed since. The hound is also badly torn.

POOR JACK PROTECTED.

Meeting of American Ship-Masters in San Francisco—No More Seamen to be Paid.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, Dec. 9.

The fight over the seamen goes bravely on. Col. Stevenson, the "sailors' friend," is crowed, and has determined to fight the old shipping-masters and the boarding-house keepers to the end. He wanted the sailor himself to get the $40 bounty; but the boarding-house keepers said it belonged to them; they procured all the crews, and no man could get a berth who would not submit to their dictation. They always selected the men from their own boarding-houses, and no outsider could get a place. Then Col. Stevenson advertised for 100 men, and he at once had more offers than he could supply places. The English ship-masters then declared they would no longer pay bounty, whereupon the boarding-house combination resolved to put up $40 a month per man. The last meeting on the cause was made Saturday, at the office of Col. Stevenson, United States Shipping Commissioner, where a meeting of American Captains was held. They were a fine-looking body of men, not much given to talking, but ready for action; so that when Col. Stevenson explained the situation they understood it, and what he thought was necessary to be done, they quietly acquiesced. One of the Captains stated that a number of men had offered to ship with him for $20 bounty, and he believed enough could be obtained without any bounty at all. Col. Stevenson stated that the bounty varying in different ships between two ship-masters and sixteen boarding-house keepers, the ship-masters getting $20 and the boarding-house keepers $20. He said one of the ship-masters had offered to divide the entire bounty with him, (Stevenson,) giving the boarding-house keepers the go-by; but, of course, the Colonel had indignantly repudiated the arrangement. Some Captains, he assured Stevenson, had taken from him (the shipping-master) $5 of his share of the bounty, and others he knew to put extra men on the ship's papers, drawing not only the bounty but the advance pay, but all the wages due the imaginary sailor on the passage. This insinuation against the honor of the Captains was indignantly repelled by those present, but it was thought best to take no notice at present. They want first to know the name of their accuser.

A long series of resolutions, offered by Col. Stevenson, was then unanimously adopted. They include the following:

Resolved, That we cordially and unanimously approve the action of English ship-masters and mariners in the publicly-expressed determination not to pay the $40 blood-money, demanded by the shipping-masters and sailor boarding-house runners for the shipping of seamen, and that we will sustain them by our hearty support and co-operation.

Resolved, That we will hereafter pay the bounty of $20, nor the increased demand for wages, (viz., $30 per month,) demanded by the intimidation Association, but we are willing to pay, through proper officers of the Government, the usually accepted rate, $18 per month for able seamen, and $25 per month for ordinary seamen, giving an advanced payment of two months and no more.

The resolutions were signed by James Bryant, ship Hamilton Fish; Isaac K. Coby, ship Elizabeth Crowell; David Crowell, jr., ship Seth Taylor, ship Fortune; N. D. Humphrey, ship Alaska; D. P. Buleiey, ship Belvidere; J. N. Knowles, ship Glory of the Seas; G. Thomas, ship Monte Rosa; N. P. Schibye, ship Nesutan; George W. Boyd, ship Wildwood; A. B. West, ship Arcadia; Francis W. Two Men Steal a Quantity of Nitro-Glycerine and Store it in Their Dwelling.

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Commercial, Dec. 17.

A remarkable case of theft has just been unearthed in Oil City, South Side, which has caused the most intense excitement among the people of the place. The stolen property, which consisted of about 140 pounds of nitro-glycerine, was taken from the McGrew farm, where it had been placed by the Roberts Torpedo Company, by two men named Jacob Crisman and Thomas Griffith, and hid in the dwelling-house of the latter, to the imminent danger, not only of his own life and family, but that of hundreds of others. Chief of Police Furlong and Officer Fulton searched the premises, and the dangerous compound was found and removed to a place of safety. Crisman and Griffith were arrested, and, in default of $5,000 bail each, were committed to jail for trial. The Derrick says:

"Griffith's family consists of a wife and six children, the oldest of whom is, perhaps, twelve years of age. For a long time he has concealed large quantities of the article in the house, thus subjecting his family to the danger of instant death without any warning. A slight movement of the stuff, any little accident of every-day life, might have caused an explosion that would have blown them from the face of the earth. But with a good fortune remarkable in its rarity, the wife and family have lived with this danger and escaped injury. It seems incredible that any man could be so criminally reckless. The house is situated on Fourth-street, a very short distance from Munnall's residence, and the residence of J. K. Lowery, Col. W. F. Fox and others. If the nitro-glycerine taken away from there on Saturday had been included in the house, it would have shattered all that portion of the city. The hill back of it would have thrown the concussion eastward, which would have thrown the river bridge from its piers, and struck Cottage Hill with terrific force. It would have been a volcano in its destructive power."

Anti-Egg-Nog Movement in Baltimore.

From the Baltimore Sun, Dec. 18.

Pursuant to a call from Mr. Wm. Daniel, President of the City Temperance Convention, a meeting of that body was held last night for the purpose of arranging for a series of temperance meetings, to take place before the Christmas holidays, to oppose the habit of indulgence in egg-nog and liquors during the festive season. It was determined to hold a grand mass-meeting at the Maryland Institute, at 2½ P. M. on Sunday next, when Hon. Schuyler Colfax and other noted public men are expected to deliver addresses. To add to the attractiveness of the meeting, there will be vocal and instrumental music, comprising the rendering of temperance songs and sacred music. On Monday night a second meeting will be held in West Baltimore, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, at which Hon. Henry Wilson is expected to speak. There seems to be a very firm resolution among many of the best citizens, very properly, to discountenance drinking at this season of the year; but there is no doubt that much of the drunkenness which too frequently disgraces Christmas Day is due to the free liquor and egg-nog of the previous day, in which young and old can fill themselves full enough during the early hours of the morning to keep drunk all day.

Shocking Acts by Medical Students.

A Montreal correspondent of the Toronto Globe says: "The medical students at Victoria College, Montreal, are becoming the disgrace of the city, and are reported to be completely beyond the control of the Professors. A few days ago a party of them stole a body from their own dissecting room, took it to McGill Medical College, received their prize, and had a drunken spree on the proceeds. Since then they have been accused of stealing in broad daylight a corpse from the Hotel Dieu, their own hospital, only dead a few hours and unburied, of taking it to a college and selling it, and spending the money in a similar way."

The Breath in Illinois.

From the Springfield (Ill.) Journal, Dec. 16.

For months this section of the State has been suffering from the effects of the long and continued drought. Farmers are actually hauling water for miles with which to water their stock, (cattle, &c., not railroads,) and the supply upon which they depended is nearly exhausted and still no rain. In our city nearly every cistern and well is as dry as a well-regulated powder-flask; our whole dependence is upon the water furnished by our system of water-works, which will be reliable until Sangamon River follows the prevailing style and dries up.

Affecting Scene in a Death Chamber.

From the Baltimore American, Dec. 17.

Last week a very amiable young lady of this city died after a long and lingering illness, with the fatal disease consumption. She was in full possession of her faculties, and conversed with her relatives almost to the instant when she peacefully fell asleep. She was a girl of over twenty years of age, and had always borne an exemplary character, and for her death had few terrors. Some months ago an aunt to whom she was greatly attached died, and half an hour before this young girl died she said to her weeping relatives who were around the bed: "Aunt Maggie was here a few moments ago, but she has gone. I want to go and be at rest, but I can't leave until she returns to go with me. I can't leave until she comes back for me." She conversed calmly with those about her, gave directions relative to the disposal of her relatives and the manner of her burial, and then, with eyes brightening as if recognizing some loved one, to all others present unseen, her spirit passed from its earthly tenement.

LOVE'S REDRESS.

A Breach of Promise Case With an American Defendant.

In the Court of Queen's Bench, on Dec. 4, says the London Daily News, the case of Dredge vs. Winans was brought to a close. Mr. Serjt. Ballantine and Mr. H. Lewis were for the plaintiff; Mr. Serjt. Parry and Mr. Marsby were for the defendant. This was an action for breach of promise of marriage, in which the damages were laid at £10,000, and the details of which were unfit for publication in our columns. It may be briefly stated that the plaintiff, Elizabeth Dredge, was in 1866 engaged as book-keeper and assistant at the establishment of Messrs. Truefitt, hairdressers and perfumers, in Bond-street and Burlington-arcade, and became acquainted, as a customer, with the defendant, Clinton Winans, an American resident in this country, and one of a firm of brothers carrying on business in London, and proprietors of what are called the "clear ships." He, it was said, visited Truefitt's places daily, paid the plaintiff attention, and offered her marriage. She consented, but the union was put off from time to time, until, as he said, his brother had settled an income upon him. In the meantime he pressed her to become his mistress, which she did. They lived together in fashionable style as Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Davidson, in Manchester-street, Manchester-square, and in October, 1867, a child was born. The intimacy continued until some time before the 25th of September, 1869, when the defendant married a widow, a Mrs. Smith, who was represented to have an income of £6,000 a year. An allowance varying in amount from £20 to £35 a month was continued for some time, and the intimacy with the plaintiff was renewed three months after the defendant's marriage.

Mr. Serjt. Parry, for the defendant, expressed his deep regret that the case had ever been brought into Court, and, admitting that the plaintiff had a moral claim, and her child every claim on his client. But for the unreasonable conduct of the plaintiff in applying to his client's brother, forcing her way into the Langham Hotel, and demanding more money than had been agreed upon, the allowance of £30 a month would have been continued, and no necessity would have arisen for this public investigation.

At the conclusion of Serjt. Parry's address, Mr. Serjt. Ballantine said, feeling the difficulty of resisting a verdict against him on the ground of breach of promise, which was all he had to contend for, he had agreed on the part of the plaintiff to take £1,500.

The Lord Chief-Justice expressed an opinion that the compensation was very inadequate.

A juror was then withdrawn. The plaintiff is to be paid £1,500 under a Judge's order.

The University of Virginia to Harvard University.

The authorities of Harvard have lately received the following letter:

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA,
OFFICE OF CHAIRMAN, Dec. 3, 1872.

President Charles W. Eliot, Harvard College:

DEAR SIR: In behalf of the Faculty of the University of Virginia, I beg to express our profound sympathy with the authorities of Harvard in their recent loss. The calamity to Harvard is a national calamity. We trust that the wise liberality of the benefactors of the higher culture of America will more than restore her losses by the Boston fire, and that speedily. With great respect, I am very truly,

CHARLES S. VENABLE,
Chairman of the Faculty.

Dudley Observatory.

The following card is published in the Albany journals:

Mr. Clarence Sterling, with the permission of the trustees and director, proposes to give his time to the observatory, confining his work especially to the spectroscope and photography; departments which have not, heretofore, been pursued at this observatory, owing to the want of instruments. Careful observations with the spectroscope are very important in the solution of many astronomical problems; and, in the opinion of the director, such observations would enhance the value of astronomical investigation. The director of the observatory will be responsible for all its scientific work and investigations. G. W. HOUGH,

ALBANY, Dec. 18. Director.

A Very Singular Story About an Old-fashioned Clock.

From the Boston Herald, Dec. 18.

Fourteen years ago, an old lady in Portland, Me., fell dead from heart disease while winding up an old-fashioned clock. The time was ten minutes before ten in the morning. Ever since that the clock has stopped at 10 o'clock on the anniversary of her death. It has never once failed in

THE STOKES TRIAL.

Getting a Jury—Three Obtained—Mr. Fellows Explains.

The trial of Edward S. Stokes for the murder of James Fisk, Jr., was commenced in the Court of Over and Terminer, yesterday, before Douglas Boardman, Judge of the Supreme Court. His counsel were Messrs. Lyman Tremain, John D. Townsend, and John E. Deepasse. The prosecution was represented by Assistant District-Attorney Fellows on the part of the people, and Messrs. Fullerton and Beach as private counsel. The day was consumed in an effort to obtain a jury, and both sides evinced a disposition to oppose no obstacle. About thirty jurors were examined, and only three were accepted. A few were challenged peremptorily, but the majority were excused for having formed and expressed opinions on the published reports of the shooting.

The names of the jurors who were impaneled are David S. Engleston, merchant, No. 156 South-street; Charles S. Loper, retired merchant, No. 62 Varick-street, and Theodore Mallaby, No. 124 Waverley-place.

During the proceedings, Assistant District-Attorney Fellows, addressing the Court, said:

I desire to call your attention to a matter personal to myself, which, it seems to me, that a just and decorous administration of justice demands at my hands. It is fair to your Honor, it is essentially fair to this prisoner, it is simple justice to myself, that I should call your attention to a statement made in one of the daily journals of this City this morning. With your Honor I have not had the honor of a personal acquaintance until you came to preside over this trial. You, therefore, know but little of my character or my habits. Those who know me best, know that, since I have held official position here, I have not accustomed myself to notice or reply to the criticisms of public journals upon my conduct or my method of administering the affairs appertaining to me in an official capacity. I have preferred that my acts should speak for themselves, and I know that, however powerful this agency and instrumentality of the Press may be for good, they may control it, the editors who write these articles, the gentlemen who furnish this news, are fallible human beings like myself, as liable to err in judgment, upon any matter to be presented to them, as I am, and whose opinions are no wortiler of regard than that of any other gentlemen of equal position and intelligence who may occupy any other capacity or vocation in life. I believe that the action of public officials is a fair matter for public criticism; but when it is presented in such a manner as seems calculated to hinder or obstruct the administration of justice, when it is made to influence the mind of a jury, especially when it taints the character of one who appears to try such an important matter as this is, it is but fair that a response should be made to it. I will read the article; but I do not care to present the name of the journal in which it appears; that is not material:

"All this Stokes can ask today is a fair and impartial trial. There should be no use of the money of Fisk to secure conviction, and no clamor of Fisk's friends to insure that result. Nor should Fisk's notorious character incline the Court or the jury to deal with leniency which the facts, as proved, do not warrant, upon the act charged upon Stokes. The highest prosecuting officer of the County should conduct the trial, for it is his work to do, and he is paid for it. There can, therefore, be no foundation for the suggestion which is afloat, that Fellows, a discreditable person, is to lead in the case. Manifestly he should not do it; for, did he not bend over the coffin of Fisk with his face suffused with tears, and exclaim, 'Good by, dear boy, good by! You was always a true and steadfast friend to me!' One whose relations with Fisk, as to money and loan transactions on small occasions, is hardly a proper person to conduct the trial of Fisk's alleged murderer."

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 18—P. M.

The sales of Gold today are at 111¼@111¾ ⅌ cent. While the market is apparently as indifferent one for sales regular way, that is for delivery the following day, the Cash Gold, for prompt delivery, is reported comparatively close. Even the severe pressure for Money, at high rates of interest, in other Wall-street quarters, has failed to affect the terms of borrowing or lending Gold. This condition of things in the Gold Room may be changed by the disbursement from the Treasury of the January Gold Interest on the Public Debt.

After the close of the steamer's mail, this morning, there was not much business done in Exchange. The rates for 60 days London are 109@109¼ ⅌ cent.

The Stock Brokers who needed Money today to carry over their Stocks, paid an eighth of one ⅌ cent, through nearly the whole day. At the very close of Bank hours loans were made at a sixteenth of one ⅌ cent. Outside the Stock Exchange Money is scarce and in demand from Merchants and Railroad Corporations. The latter are paying 12 ⅌ cent. on their acceptances, or their creditors are paying this rate to Cash their obligations, and it is no secret that some of the best lines in the country are needing Money on the best terms they can make for Temporary accommodation. The paper of the Reading, the Pennsylvania Central, and Central of New-Jersey is reported to be on the Street, and loans on the strength of their recently issued Bonds are sought for by other prominent lines at one ⅌ cent. a month.

The offers to sell United States 5-20s to the Sinking Fund today amounted to only $512,000, and these were all declined by the Secretary of the Treasury, as above the price of Gold, or as affording no difference for the Exchange. The Treasury will sell to-morrow $1,000,000 Gold. Complaint is made that this increases the Currency balance in the Sub-Treasury at New-York at an unfortunate season for the Money market, but we apprehend the Department needs the Currency in settlement of its own Gold Year obligations. The Secretary would not otherwise have drawn upon the balances deposited with the Bank of Commerce and Fourth National in October. We feel quite sure that he designs no undue accumulation of Currency in the Sub-Treasury at the close of the year.

On the Stock Exchange, the Share speculation was again strong, in spite of dear Money. The Pacific Mail excitement continued the feature of the market, and the rapid and extreme ups and downs size rise to various and conflicting rumors on the Street as to what Capt. Stockwell, the President of the Company, is about, what he designs to do, and what his consulting Directors will advise him to in the way of building new ships to replace the recent wrecks, and how he is to raise the Money, assuming that he needs Money. The sales of the Stock ranged 76@74¾@80@81 ⅌ cent., the highest figure being made in the Afternoon, after the reported adjournment of a conference between the President and Directors without doing anything. Next to Pacific Mail, the Western Telegraph Stock was strongest in price, and very active in the demand; and among the Railroads, Lake Shore, Erie, and Rock Island were firm and in good demand in the forenoon, but late in the day tight Money rather told upon the whole list. After Bank hours, some of the Brokers were supposed to be sellers of the Railroads to relieve their Money wants of to-morrow. Most of them acknowledge that the slinging today was unusually severe, and the rate almost uniformly made an eighth ⅌ cent. for carrying Stocks over night.

Fifty Thousand Dollars Damages for the Loss of a Mistress.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, Dec. 9.

The case of James H. Jacobs, administrator of the estate of Margaret A. Jacobs, deceased, against the Central Pacific Railroad Company, has been transferred from Alameda to the Third District Court of this city for trial, for the convenience of witnesses. The action is brought on complaint to recover damages for the death of Margaret A. Jacobs, wife of plaintiff, administrator, alleged to have been occasioned by the negligence of the Railroad Company. Plaintiff avers that on the 19th of April, 1871, Mrs. Jacobs crossed on the Oakland ferry-boat, and took passage by the steamer Pioneer for Broadway station, Oakland. That while she was leaving the cars at that station, under direction of the agents and employes of the Company, by reason of insufficient time being allowed her to step upon the platform before the car again started, she was thrown under the wheels of the car and instantly killed. Plaintiff also avers that she was the mother of five children, between the ages of fourteen and five years, who have suffered a great pecuniary loss and injury, and that damage has resulted to them, as heirs of her, in the sum of $50,000, which amount they seek to recover by this action.

An Intricate Case—Lawyers Trying Their Professional Remedies.

Some time since John D. Monell commenced criminal proceedings in Jefferson Market Court against Frank F. Higgins, John D. Higgins, and John H. Thomas, charging them with conspiring to defraud him. Subsequently these persons charged him with having been engaged in the negotiation of fraudulent bonds, and now Monell brings a civil suit against them for slander. It appears that Monell, Frank F. Higgins, and Jno. H. Thomas were engaged in the practice of law at Nos. 97 and 99 Nassau-street, and that in August, during the absence of Monell in the country, his partner executed a chattel mortgage on the furniture and law-books to Joseph D. Higgins, father of one of them. This purported to be to secure the payment of a note for $500, issued by Monell seventy days previously, but there was no such note in existence. To satisfy this mortgage the office equipments were sold, and the partnership broken up. In addition to this, Monell declares that false reports were placed in circulation that he had defrauded his clients, and that he was convicted in the sale of forged bonds and mortgages.

A warrant was issued a few days ago by Judge Larremore, in the Court of Common Pleas, and upon it Deputy Sheriff Gale yesterday arrested Joseph D. Higgins and John H. Thomas. They were rendered to Ludlow-street Jail in default of $5,000 bail.

The Stolen Mail-Bags.

An examination in the case of Samuel Conen, Ignatz Kanders, Moritz Somers, and John Kafke, charged with having possession of United States mail-bags, was held by Commissioner Shields yesterday. Testimony was introduced to show that the firm bought the bags for $61 at from Walzer H. Elliott, of No. 149 West Broadway, a rag-dealer, and other bags from Charles McGinness, of No. 27 Sheriff-street, in good faith. They were, therefore, honorably discharged.

The United States Marshals yesterday recovered a large quantity of the United States mail-bags which had been stolen, on the premises of Thomas Lamb, a Pike-street junk-dealer. Lamb made affidavit that he obtained about 4,000 pounds of the bags from Charles McGinness, doing business in Sheriff-street, near Delancey, from time to time during the past two months. McGinness was arrested and held in $500 bail by Commissioner Shields.

The Jumel Estate.

In the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, an early adjournment of the Jumel case was had. The claimant wished to introduce the testimony of Mrs. Mary Morilla Mumford, formerly an adopted daughter of Mme. Jumel, to show that the latter had acknowledged to Mrs. Mumford that she had had an illegitimate son. Mr. O'Conor objected, raising the point that any evidence affecting the title to the estate must be from the positive knowledge of the witness. Mrs. Mumford's testimony Mr. Hoar will contest this to-morrow.

Fresh arrivals for yesterday and today at Forty-eighth-street Hog Yards: 11,005 Hogs, 696 Sheep, with 8 cars of Sheep due.

Fresh arrivals for yesterday and today at Forty-eighth-street Cattle Yards: 2,710 Sheep and Lambs, 30 Cows, 10 Veals, 8 Stages, 90 Bulls.

BUFFALO, Dec. 18.—The Cattle receipts today, including 73 cars reported to arrive, amounted to 1,800 head, making the total receipts for the week thus far, 5,477 head or 31 consignments, 22 cars in the same time last week. The market was dull at last week's closing rates. There was a fair attendance of buyers, whose views of the market were for low enough prices to holders. The large quantities of poor fresh beef slaughtered in the West and sent to the Eastern markets, together with the large amount of Hog offals offering at the seaboard, have seriously affected the consumption of good fresh Beef. When to these is added the heavy accumulations of Live Cattle, the competition is more than the Cattle market can bear. About 1,000 head were disposed of today. Sales are the following: Steers, ranging from 1,067 to 1,450 lbs., at $4@$4 50; 40 Ohio Steers, average 1,242 lbs., at $4 25; 18 Texas Steers, average 1,139 lbs., at $4 50; 23 Nebraska Steers, averaging 1,250 lbs., at $4 50; 23 Nebraska Steers, averaging 1,197 to 1,313 lbs., at $4 75. Sheep and Lambs: Receipts today, 2,800 head, making the total supply for the week, thus far, 4,600 head, against 3,800 head last week. The market for Sheep is not dull at 5c. advance, on all grades, on last week's prices; sales are Michigan Sheep, ranging from 65 to 78 lbs., at $4 20; 481 Illinois Sheep, ranging from 67 to 100 lbs., at $4 20; 38 Ohio Sheep, ranging from 141 lbs., at $3 62½; 28 Ohio Lambs, averaging 94 lbs., at 6¼c. Hogs—Receipts today, including 21 cars, reported to arrive, 1,200 head, making the total supply for the week, thus far, 12,600 head, against 19,800 head for the same time last week; market dull at a shade off from yesterday's prices; supply in excess of the demand; sales are 1,400 Ohio Hogs, ranging from 190 to 250 lbs., at $4 [illegible]; 1,000 Ohio Hogs, ranging from 190 to 250 lbs., at $4 [illegible]; 1,000 Indiana Hogs, ranging from 190 to 250 lbs., at $4 [illegible]

New-Hampshire Republicans hold a State Convention on the 14th of next month. The call of the State Committee is a very sensible document. It is addressed to those "who accept the settlement of the prominent issues of the last ten years as just and final," to those who supported GRANT and WILSON, and to "all who believe that honesty and efficiency, rather than political activity," should be the essential qualifications for the public service.

The community, which has been shocked by the brutal murder of DURYEA in Liberty-street, will note, with satisfaction, that Recorder HACKETT has just sent a man to hard labor for seven years for killing another in a drunken fight. The prisoner in this case was a poor Swede. DURYEA's murderer is a rich gambler, and it will be interesting to see whether the final result will be affected by that fact.

At the Harlem Court-house investigation, yesterday, a witness stated that he "inferred that there could be no transaction in the City of New-York without compensation somewhere." As the tax-payers know, this inference was exceedingly just in regard to the transactions of the reign of TWEED, and it is, perhaps, not to be wondered at that it should not be altogether destitute of truth even now. For, even in the Departments which have been placed on a nominal basis of reform, a good many minor rogues have survived the fall of their chiefs. This is especially manifest in quarters where supplies have to be purchased for public purposes. In one and all of the Departments which make purchases not given out under contract, there is a system of "compensation," almost universal in practice, though somewhat difficult of detection. The Finance Department has for months past been engaged in a continuous struggle against the petty stealings sanctioned or participated in by purchasing clerks and other minor officials. This Department has asserted, in spite of protests in the Courts and elsewhere, its undoubted legal right to satisfy itself of the correctness and justice of every claim, small and great, which it is called on to pay. This work of supervision, necessarily tedious and difficult, may possibly have interposed some little delay in the payment of perfectly valid debts. But it is obviously calculated to be of as much ultimate benefit to tradesmen as to the tax-payers at large. It strikes at the root of corrupt favoritism in purchasing, and it preserves for public use money which would otherwise have been divided between unjust public servants, and the tradesmen in collusion with them.

The counsel of J. MCBRIDE DAVIDSON testified yesterday that his client was very much excited at the time of the publication of the fraudulent warrants in the TIMES, and that he thereupon resolved to supply no more goods to the City or County unless they were paid in advance. This recalls a circumstance which ought not to be allowed to slip out of public recollection. The great safe-maker was, doubtless, very much astounded to see what a deal of money his friends of the Ring had drawn under his name, without either his knowledge or consent. Messrs. JOHN J. DONALDSON and H. B. CLAFLIN, in their capacity of sub-committee of investigation examined, with the assistance of competent experts, the DAVIDSON and other warrants drawn on account of Court-house work. Their opinion is on record that Mr. DAVIDSON's signature is forged to five warrants, representing an amount of $163,600 72. A similar opinion is recorded in regard to seven warrants bearing the signature of ARCHIBALD HALL, Jr., on which some $147,000 were obtained, while in regard to eighteen warrants, bearing the indorsement of C. A. BOLLER, the following remark is made: "The indorsements on these checks are various, and on most of them are believed not to be genuine." The moral of all which is, that the tax-payers should remember that they are no more responsible than a private firm would be for money obtained from their bank account on forged checks. The Broadway Bank and the Tenth National Bank cashed nearly all the checks above referred to. To people who have just had to pay somewhat oppressive tax bills, it would be decidedly interesting to hear how soon steps are to be taken to recover the money thus obtained. Is it for the purpose of cheating the people out of this measure of justice that a prominent bank manager has headed a very heavy subscription list to a corruption fund designed to influence the new Legislature?

By the cable, we are informed that Spain is on the eve of another Ministerial crisis—which is not startling news—and that in the French Assembly the Committee of Thirty are debating whether or not they shall go into the question of complete constitutional reconstruction. As the main business of the Committee is to save time for M. THIERS, no better question could have been proposed for it.

A letter in another column on our Currency and the Banks will be read with interest. Its author, whose name we are not at liberty to use, is a gentleman of wide experience and of great sagacity in finance.

Democrats and the City.

The public will not fail to notice that the attempt to save Mayor HAVEMEYER, a Democrat, from the clutches of a few intriguing Republicans, proceeds exclusively from Republican newspapers. With the exception of the Brooklyn Eagle, which we have generally found a fair and independent paper, no Democratic journal utters a word of protest against the trickery by which Mayor HALL proposes to turn Mr. HAVEMEYER into a mere dummy. The protests come from us alone—from us who are so often accused of being a rabid and ultra-partisan organ. We are especially speaking of morning papers—for the Evening Post has had one or two vigorous articles denouncing the schemes of the Oakey Hall Republicans. It might naturally have been thought that Democratic journals would have been foremost in the work of exposing this conspiracy. Mr. HAVEMEYER belongs to their side of the house, and it was their duty to render him all the assistance they could. We are in favor of allowing him to enter upon his duties unfettered by OAKEY HALL's tools; since he has to be largely responsible for the management of City affairs during the next two years, it is only right that he should select the officials who are to work with him. We only ask that these officials should be honest and capable men, and that mere party consideration should be put out of sight in their appointment.

Of course, no one could expect the World to oppose any scheme of Mayor HALL. That remarkable paper advocated the infamous Code Amendments bill, which HALL was said to have drawn up, and it defended him all through 1871. To this day it has never published a line of the fraudulent accounts, which did so much to bring home to the Tammany Ring our charges of dishonesty. HALL and his friends long ago made it "all right" with the World, and even ordered it to denounce Mr. ANDREW H. GREEN, on his appointment as an accomplice of CONNOLLY, and Mr. S. J. TILDEN as a "railroad politician." From this quarter nothing could be expected, but we must say that we are disappointed in the Staats Zeitung. That excellent paper has often qualified its approbation of our course with the remark that it was not sure we would oppose Republican trickery whenever we found it going on. We were vigorous enough in attacking Democratic rogues—but how should we act when we had to carry the war into our own camp? We have now given the Staats Zeitung grounds enough on which it could form a fair opinion on that point, and we expected to see it joining with us in the attempt to secure a fair and honest government for the City. But it is silent. It is devoting itself to the discussion of "Bier und Wein," and subjects of similar moment. But it does not try to shield Mayor HAVEMEYER from the clique which is anxious to bind him hand and foot. If one of us has failed in denouncing Republican wrong-doing, it is not the TIMES, but the Staats Zeitung.

We, nevertheless, hope to gain the support of our contemporary, and to see during next year a fair attempt on the part of all honest journals to get a much better government for the City than we have had for some years past. This can only be accomplished by papers like the Evening Post, the Staats Zeitung, and others, working hand in hand, and insisting on personal integrity and capability forming the chief claims for admission to office. We shall certainly never oppose a Democrat simply because he happens to be a Democrat. It is a satisfaction to us to know that all the leading Republicans of the City—the gentlemen who hold important offices, from the Collector of the Port downward, are entirely free from any complicity in the scheme to allow OAKEY HALL to make the appointments which properly belong to Mayor HAVEMEYER. If the City is ever to be republican in its government, it will be made so by our proving that Republicans are capable of rising above purely partisan considerations, and are anxious only to promote the welfare of the great body of our citizens. In the course last election, the Republican Party gave an earnest of these intentions, and it is not injured by the foolish and selfish proceedings of a few men who hover on its outskirts.

The New Civil Service Rules.

A good deal of misapprehension exists regarding the actual requirements of the civil service rules, adopted by the President last Winter. It is generally supposed that they proceed on the principle of filling all the offices by competitive examination. On this supposition a great number of objections are urged to them, which have no more force than if they were addressed to the Darwinian hypothesis. Some of these objections come from men who ought to know better, and who are simply ignorant. Some come from men who do know better and are simply dishonest. Between the two, the people are likely to be confused, and to form a very erroneous idea of what the President actually proposes. Whether his proposition is sound or mistaken, he has a right to ask that it be judged on its merits, and not on the merits of some utterly imaginary scheme set up in its place.

The civil service rules do not, to start with, require all the offices to be filled in accordance with any rigid method. A large number of important offices are not brought under the rules at all. The thirteenth rule declares that the following officers are excepted from the rules altogether:

"Heads of Departments, Assistant Secretaries of Departments, Assistant Attorneys-General, and First Assistant Postmaster-General, Solicitor-General, Solicitor of the Treasury, Naval Solicitor, Solicitor of Internal Revenue, Examiner of Claims in the State Department, Treasurer of the United States, Register of the Treasury, First and Second Controllers of the Treasury, Judges of the United States Courts, District-Attorneys, Private Secretary of the President, Ambassadors and other public Ministers, Superintendent of the Coast Survey, Director of the Mint, Governors of Territories, Special Commissioners, Special Counsel, Visiting and Examining Boards, persons appointed to positions without compensation for services, dispatch-agents, and bearers of dispatches."

It is easy to see the motive of most of these exceptions. They leave the President free in the choice of those officers on whose general sympathy with his views he must depend, and in the choice of the legal officers of the Departments and of the United States Courts, and of diplomatic officers. When any of our readers, therefore, hear from the opponents of the President's reform that it ties the hands of the Executive in regard to the more important offices of the Government, they will remember these exceptions.

In the second place, the new rules do not undertake to fill any office solely by the result of a competitive examination. Such an examination is only one, and by no means the most important or the most valuable, of the tests employed to secure efficiency in the service. Where an examination is ordered, the examiners are required to name to the appointing power three of the persons who come best out of the ordeal, and it is left to the discretion of the appointing power which of these three shall be chosen. In the cases of persons entering the service, even this is not final. The examinations show three persons best qualified so far as qualification can be thus determined. From these the appointer chooses one. This one is then appointed on probation for six months. If, at the end of that time, he is found capable, he is appointed for a full term. If he is found incapable, he simply drops out of office, not by formal dismissal, but by the conclusion of the term of his provisional appointment.

Again, the President's reform makes great use of the test of experience in another way. Vacancies in offices coming under the rules are filled from subordinates in the same line of duty, if possible. If a subordinate can be found who has fitted himself for higher duties, and if the examination shows his fitness for promotion, he gets it against all outside applicants. In every case, whether of promotion in, or admission to the service, the examination is framed to test not only "knowledge and ability," but "special qualifications for the performance of the duties of the office."

It will thus be seen that, even in the cases where competitive examination is employed, it is by no means the sole test, but is strictly auxiliary and secondary to the test of experience. It may be said, generally, that the examination is the large sieve; experience is the finer one, which sifts the material selected by the former.

But there is a large class of cases not entirely excepted, in which competitive examination is not employed at all, but where the object of the rules is simply to take advantage of experience alone and fill vacancies by promotion, where any subordinate can be found competent. In some of these cases the choice of subordinates is left to the President on the recommendation of the head of the Department; in the remainder to the appointer—whether President or head of Department—on the recommendation of the Examining Board. The Philadelphia Postmastership was an instance of this kind. The following are the cases in which the head of Department must nominate subordinates for the President to choose from, if any subordinates are in his judgment qualified:

"Collector of Customs, Naval Officer, Appraiser or Surveyor of the Customs in the Customs Districts of New-York, Boston and Charlestown, Baltimore, San Francisco, New-Orleans, Philadelphia, Vermont, (Burlington,) Oswego, Niagara, Buffalo Creek, Champlain, Portland and Falmouth, Corpus Christi, Oswegatchie, Mobile, Brazos de Santiago, (Brownsville,) Texas, (Galveston, &c.,) Savannah, Charleston, Chicago, and Detroit; and Postmasters in cities having a population, according to the census of 1870, of twenty thousand or more."

Vacancies in the chief offices of customs not in the above districts, and in some of the minor post-offices, are to be filled from three subordinates, certified by the Examining Board. In all these cases, if subordinates are not found fit, or if the nominations are not confirmed by the Senate, the appointments are to be made at the discretion of the appointer.

The above is a concise statement of the actual requirements of the President's civil service reform rules as they are now in operation. No one who will make himself familiar with these rules can doubt that they have been adopted as a practical means of securing greater efficiency in the civil service, and not from a doctrinaire desire to cure all ills by a single nostrum. It must be remembered that the President reserves the power to modify these rules at his discretion.

The Simmons Murder.

Monday's murder was, in some respects, the most remarkable of any of our recent daily homicides. Whether we consider the thoroughness with which DURYEA was chopped to pieces, or the coolness with which SIMMONS waited for the officers to carry him comfortably to the station-house, it is impossible not to recognise the artistic superiority of the Liberty-street murder over such an impulsive and roughly-executed crime as that for which FOURNI has been subjected to an inconvenient detention in the Tombs. Of course, the indictment of SIMMONS may be regarded as a certainty, but as to the particular plea upon which he will be subsequently set at liberty, there is much room for speculation.

In SIMMONS' demeanor after the commission of his crime, he showed his perfect confidence in the protection which the mandlin juryman and the merciful Judge will extend to him. As to the possibility of incurring the unpleasant attentions of the hangman, Mr. SIMMONS undoubtedly regards that contingency as being rather more remote than that of a prize in one of his well-known lotteries falling to a bona-fide ticket-holder. It is true that there will be no difficulty in proving that he stabbed DURYEA, but the accomplished criminal lawyer can easily prove that the act was altogether a justifiable and commendable one. There is the defense of emotional insanity, caused by the heartless conduct of DURYEA in supplanting SIMMONS in the affections of some fair and fickle woman. To be sure, no one has yet heard of any such feminine element in the affair, but it will be perfectly easy for SIMMONS' lawyer to paint a picture of man's duplicity and woman's weakness, which will draw tears and a verdict of immediate acquittal from the most slow-witted juryman. Or it can be proved that the stabbing was an act of self-defense. The fact that SIMMONS, who was vastly the superior of DURYEA in physical strength, was comfortably sitting upon him when he leisurely probed his person in various places with an inquisitive bowie-knife, need not conflict with this defense. The criminal lawyer who could not show that DURYEA, with premeditated and cunning malignity, contrived to place himself beneath SIMMONS, and hold the latter firmly by placing his collar in SIMMONS' hand, while he selected an available spot in which to shoot him, does not deserve to practice at the New-York Bar. Even if, by accident, the line of defense chosen by the murderer's counsel should not prove successful, there are appeals, writs of error, and other ingenious proceedings by which the execution of his sentence could be postponed for a year or two, until Justice PRATT, the Murderer's Best Friend, should find a fitting opportunity to step in, and, by one of those peculiar processes for the protection of murderers which he has so often used with invariable success, enable Mr. SIMMONS to once more resume the beneficent business of managing lotteries that never lose.

Four weeks ago there were twenty-two murderers in the Tombs. The list is much longer now, and is still steadily increasing. Not one in twenty of these men will meet with any punishment beyond a few months' detention in prison. Either jurymen will acquit them, or Judges will lend their aid to help them to escape by means of pettifogging trickery. The ruffian knows that he can kill with impunity. There is practically no law against murder in this City. The statute has been made a dead letter by idiots in the jury-box and reckless Judges on the Bench. How long do the respectable people of New-York propose to endure this state of things? How much longer will our Courts be permitted to make a mockery of justice, and to sacrifice the peaceful citizen in order to save the murderer from the gallows?

Chess Champions.

The late tragical death of FOURNIER DE SAINT AMANT brings back many interesting recollections. Once famous as the greatest chess-player in the world, and for years held to be the champion of France, M. ST. AMANT lived to be nearly seventy-three, and to die from being thrown from his carriage. Not much has been heard of him of late years; but, thirty years ago, the clubs, and, indeed, all society, both in Paris and London, rang with his fame. It was in 1843 that HOWARD STAUNTON ventured to dispute ST. AMANT's title to be called the chess champion of Europe. The celebrated match then arranged—the greatest ever contested for the amount of the stakes, the wide interest excited, and the time consumed in the games—ended in the Frenchman's defeat. It was a gallant struggle, and the prevalent opinion of experts has been that Mr. STAUNTON, distinguished as were his merits, won by superior endurance rather than by superior skill. However, the match was fairly played, according to the stipulated terms, and to the victor the honors fairly belonged. The excitement over this memorable encounter was intense. That created by the Heenan-Sayers battle was nothing to it. All classes in England and France watched the match with breathless attention. The games were commented upon, from day to day, by the leading journals of both countries, and the probable effect upon the result of each new development of tactics was weighed and disputed as if the fate of empires were the stake at issue.

It is a common superstition that people who play chess well can do nothing else well, and the negative side of the proposition has some tolerable evidence to support it. Several famous captains who excelled in the real field of war have failed in the mimic field of chess. NAPOLEON, who was passionately fond of the game, never could attain to any strength in it, and the same has been and is true of eminent soldiers in our own country. But it happens that both parties in the chess match spoken of have proved themselves the possessors of marked ability in other vocations. Chess is a game of singular fascination, and people having natural aptitude, who once fall in love with it, are very apt to devote themselves too exclusively to its pursuit. They are thus likely to be credited in time with ability for nothing else. On the other hand, the bad players who are good soldiers have commonly given too much time and thought to excel in war, to leave space to excel in chess. On the whole, much the same qualities that bring success in the one walk, with equal vigor and industry bring success in the other. M. ST. AMANT himself disproved the popular notion by skill and remarkable achievements in several different and important departments. In his mission to Cayenne he showed high qualities as a diplomatist and statesman. His works on the French colonies are standard books of study and reference. At the head of part of the National Guard of Paris, he repeatedly—and notably in 1848—evinced courage, presence of mind, and military capacity. He made chess his pastime, rather than the sole and engrossing pursuit of his life; and, although from the renown he acquired by its practice his name was more frequently connected with chess than with anything else, it is certain that, in the absence of that particular talent, his claims to rank as a man of distinction would have been generally allowed.

A counterpart to this experience is suggested by the name of PHILIDOR, whose name would have come down to us as a famous musician had his powers at the chess-board been less conspicuous. Mr. STAUNTON, too, would be well known, or, we should rather say, better known, as an editor of SHAKESPEARE, and as the historian of the Great Schools of England, but for his overshadowing exploits at his favorite game. These examples, which are but a few among the many that might be given, are pretty good proofs that to be strong at chess does not imply weakness in other things. The penetration, sagacity, and self-control, and, what is more important still, the special faculty for judging, in critical situations, of the relative importance of things, must needs be as important elements for general success in life as for success in the checkered arena that saw the triumphs of a MORPHY or a SAINT AMANT.

Private Lamps.

Considering the heavy burdens which TWEED and his gang imposed on the tax-payers of this City, we have time and again urged that nothing should be left undone to reduce expenditures whenever an opportunity occurred. The Aldermen, however, do not appear to be of our way of thinking. On the 1st of July, of the present year, a resolution was passed by them purporting to direct the Commissioner of Public Works to disconnect from the main pipes all gas-lamps lighted for private purposes at the public expense. The matter was then allowed to drop until the 17th of October, when it came up in the following shape before the Assistant Aldermen:

"Assistant Alderman SIMONSON offered the following resolution:

That any and all resolutions heretofore adopted by the Common Council providing for the erection and maintenance of lamps in front of private property, at the expense of the City, be and they are hereby rescinded and repealed; and that the Commissioner of Public Works be and he is hereby directed to collect from such property-owners as require the retention of such lamps as aforesaid in front of their property the actual cost of the maintenance of such lamps, and that in all other cases the said Commissioner take the necessary steps to cause the immediate removal of such lamps.

Referred to the Committee on Lamps and Gas."

Beyond these spasmodic efforts at reform, there is no sign that anything has been accomplished toward putting an end to this shameful abuse. Last year, some seventy thousand and odd dollars were squandered for the lighting of private lamps. In front of Tammany Hall there are six of them, having three or more burners to each; a church at the corner of Fourteenth-street and Second-avenue has four; and so on, to the number of 1,248. We are quite sure that no congregation would be willing to pay for the lighting of four lamps, outside their church door, every night throughout the year. To cut off the gas under such circumstances would not, therefore, be likely to cause any dissatisfaction. The claims of clubs and halls are not worthy of the slightest consideration. The Commissioner of Public Works, in his report, just published, makes allusion to this subject; but from the present Boards of Aldermen it is not very likely that any relief will be afforded. Better things are expected from the incoming Boards.

The Washington Monument.

The Society which has in charge the completion of the Washington Monument at the national capital has recently been greatly encouraged by the receipt of one hundred and twenty-five dollars from two patriotic Masonic lodges in California. With this sum, at least one additional stone can be laid upon that curious pile which challenges the wonder of the foreigner who visits Washington, and the Society may therefore fairly report progress in the work of completing the monument. Whether the admirers of WASHINGTON should rejoice or grieve over such a report, is a question which it is by no means easy to decide.

That the monument has been for twenty years in an exceedingly unfinished state, is due partly to the mistake made by the Society when it insisted upon presenting to all persons who subscribed a dollar to the work an engraving representing it as it was intended to appear upon its completion. The wretched recipient of this gift either broke out into bitter lamentation over his error in assisting to rear so monstrous a scarecrow, or, being a person of rare fatuity, complacently hung it upon his wall, and thus inspired his visitors with a deep-rooted opposition to the scheme. In either case, the result was the same. The public declined to devote its dollars to the monument, and the country suffered under the opprobrium of being unwilling to incur the cost of honoring the memory of WASHINGTON by expensive architectural absurdities.

It is certainly questionable whether the completion, or the refusal to complete, this monument would be the greater evil. As is generally known, the plan of the monument is a piecemeal imitation of an Egyptian monolithic obelisk, based upon a curiously-comic Grecian temple. Why the designer contented himself with this incongruous complication of architectural evils, does not appear. He ought to have provided for a series of Gothic flying buttresses, and crowned his obelisk with a Byzantine dome, bearing upon its apex a bronze statue, modeled by Mr. CLARKE MILLS, and exhibiting the Father of his Country in the act of neatly balancing himself upon his head. The plan would then have had a certain coherence of imbecility, which would have made it absolutely unequaled by anything the world has yet seen in the shape of humorous memorial architecture.

Undeniably bad as the design of this monument is, it is perhaps better than no monument whatever. There are those who hold that to rear a premeditated monument to WASHINGTON is unnecessary, and that, as Sir CHRISTOPHER WREN declined a private statue in St. Paul's, and preferred that the whole Cathedral should be regarded as his monument, so WASHINGTON doubtless would have preferred that the Republic which he made possible should be regarded as his only appropriate monument. The objection to this theory is obvious. The irreverent critic may mock at Sir CHRISTOPHER, by selecting the weakest points of St. Paul's Cathedral, and scornfully claiming them as lasting memorials of the architect's incompetency. In like manner, the hater of republics might select the modern juryman, and claim that he is the unpleasant monument of the folly of the immortal defender of free institutions. Moreover, such an excuse for not building a really noble monument, would be justly open to the suspicion of parsimonious motives. Since the vast majority of Americans are agreed that a Washington monument is desirable, it is probably best that the one upon which so much money has already been spent should be completed. When once the shaft shall have been finished, it will be an easy matter to tear away the comic temple which grovels at its base. We shall then have an obelisk, which, though it will be a patchwork pretense of a monolith, will, nevertheless, be imposing, because of its apparent simplicity and gigantic height. We may, therefore, congratulate the Society upon the $125 which has just enriched its treasury, and hope that in course of time the completed obelisk will replace the ruinous pile of mason work which for so many years has disfigured the capital.

MINOR TOPICS.

Free discussion is one thing, and the interruption of a lecturer is another. Nevertheless, there is a large class of ambitious persons who attend public lectures, and interrupt the speaker by putting to him questions which the proposers firmly believe will overwhelm their victim with confusion and dismay. The other evening Miss ANNA DICKINSON suppressed a person of this sort in a way which her audience greatly enjoyed. A budding orator, who announced that he was engaged in the jewelry business, rose up, and after explaining how much work he did in a day, propounded some utterly preposterous conundrums to the lecturer. Whereto the other, with disdainful brow, quietly remarked that she had not engaged to answer conundrums, but to deliver a lecture, and thereupon proceeded in her discussion, leaving the ambitious jeweler to be laughed at by an unsympathizing audience. He and his kind should remember that people who assemble to hear a lecture do not desire to have the crude ideas of ignorant persons violently intruded upon them, thereby interrupting that which they have paid their money to hear.

The recent loss of the Sacramento was apparently due partly to the inaccuracy of the charts of the locality where she was lost, and partly to the recklessness of the Captain. The charts were known to be inaccurate, and there was a dense fog at the time the vessel struck. The course which the ship was steering was supposed to be one which would carry her eight miles to the westward of the nearest land. Now, is it proper for the commander of a ship, who knows that his charts cannot be absolutely depended upon, to try to run within eight miles of the shore in a dense fog? Had he given the land a wider berth, thus making due allowance for any inaccuracy in his charts or compass, or for any current which might sweep him from his course, the Sacramento would not now be lying a total wreck on the San Antonio reef. Had the weather been clear, the accident would not have happened, but a cautious Captain does not risk shipwreck by shaving a dangerous coast in a heavy fog.

Harvard College, under the guidance of President ELLIOT, seems to have caught the spirit of the age, and changes in the discipline are about to be made which will undoubtedly increase the usefulness of this ancient and honored institution of learning. It has long been known in the universities of Europe that students become creditable in proportion as they are forced by moral influences to self-exertion, and the Faculty of Harvard have wisely determined to abolish compulsory attendance upon recitations, while they maintain the rigor of examinations unimpaired. The standing of each student under this arrangement will depend wholly upon himself, and this fact being constantly presented to him in the rule of his college, it is certain that he will not be so likely to waste his time as under the old method. Another contemplated reform is the abolition of morning prayers, and it is no small improvement on past ways that students, in the future, are not to have an opportunity to make a mockery of religious exercises. Old Harvard being thus progressive, it is to be hoped that whatever diminution of her revenues may have been caused by the Boston fire, will be speedily made up by public contributions.

A fresh evidence of the evil of being over religious is furnished in the recent bankruptcy of one of the best-known paper manufacturers of the West, Mr. JOSIAH A. HOOMAN, a prominent citizen of Milwaukee, Wis., for a quarter of a century. Mr. HOOMAN has voluntarily gone into the bankrupt Court, as he says himself, "in order that he had not defrauded anybody when they saw fit" to do so. He continues, "He first became involved in legal difficulties through a dispute over points of water-power, his property in dispute; and, although he has disbursed upward of one hundred thousand dollars in endeavoring to settle the claims on this account, they are still as great as to involve him in ruin. One of the chief hardships of the case consists in the fact that Mr. HOOMAN has completed his sixtieth year, and may find it pretty difficult work accumulating again. He has just published a very affecting letter by way of explaining his situation, which has this pleasant to illustration of the old proverb—"When poverty comes in the door, love flies out the window."

"And you will find it, (the coldness,) perhaps, more than anywhere else, in the very midst of those you have counted as your friends; with those to whom you have rendered unremembered favors, to whom you are to novice indeed, and whose extended hands, warm hearts, and sympathizing glances you would expect to be the first to greet you. On the other hand, you would be cheered by kind words and generous offers from persons from which you would have in vain expected them, or surprised at meeting them at all."

The people of Chicago are at present supposed to be in a state of agitation over the prospect of a monopoly, which some persons think may have the effect of setting up a clique of men who will have it in their power to fix the price of every pound of meat sold in the markets of that city. It appears that there is a desire on the part of gentlemen, learned in sanitary science, to concentrate the slaughtering and rendering establishments in one district, so that the noxious gases which now escape and make a residence in certain localities exceedingly undesirable, may be controlled in such a way as to become perfectly harmless. The proprietor of one establishment is understood to have utilized these gases for illuminating purposes, providing himself with a light in many respects superior to the ordinary coal-gas. To get rid of the offal, a machine has been invented. It consists of a revolving boiler, with an eight-ton capacity, and a double shell, so constructed as to allow for the presence of perforated pipes, through which hot air passes. The boiler, in revolving, slowly stirs up the offal and brings it into contact with heated surfaces, making the entire contents as dry as flour in about forty minutes.

From the statistics of the loss of life upon the great lakes during the present season, it appears that 116 persons were drowned, and of this number 112 were lost with the vessels upon which they were engaged. The other seventy-six cases were those of sailors who fell overboard, and were washed off by heavy seas. This loss of life seems sufficiently large, but the exact number of such casualties is sixty-one less than during the previous year. As we stated, the other day, there were 651 disasters to vessels upon the lakes during the year, and this fact, taken in connection with the loss of life, shows that the navigation of the lakes is not less hazardous than that of the ocean. When the warnings of the Signal Service Bureau come to be more generally established and heeded at the lake ports, we may hope for a large reduction in this annual destruction of life and property.

The Salaries of Public Officers.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have read with much satisfaction some two or three very sensible editorials, recently published in the TIMES, on the subject of the small compensation allowed the various Federal officers—the President, United States Judges, and the heads of the different Departments at Washington—in which editorials you recommend a liberal increase of compensation for their services.

Your suggestion for an increase of compensation of the Federal officers enumerated in your editorials seems just and proper, and if adopted by Congress would give general satisfaction, and be approved by a large majority of the people of the United States.

It seems to the writer that your recommendation should have extended further, and have embraced other Federal officers not enumerated in the editorials above referred to, whose compensation seems inadequate, not only for their services rendered, but also for the great responsibility resting upon them.

I allude more particularly to some of the officers in the different departments in the New-York Custom-house, the Deputy Collector, Surveyor, Naval Officer, Appraisers, and United States Inspectors of Customs.

From the fact that nearly or quite two-thirds of the whole amount of revenue derived from Customs in the United States is collected at the port of New-York, some idea may be formed of the vast amount of business daily transacted at the New-York Custom-house, and of the responsibility involved in the collection of the revenue.

The compensation of the last class of officers above named is entirely inadequate to the amount of duty performed and the responsibility necessarily imposed upon them. Millions upon millions of dollars in valuable merchandise annually pass through their hands with little or no loss to the revenue, and yet for their daily services from sunrise to sunset they receive only the same amount of money that the loafers and loiterers (many of whom can neither read nor write) receive for one or two hours' service, and $2 per day less than many mechanics receive for theirs, and that with little or no responsibility attached.

With the exception of the situation occupied by the high price of house rents in the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn, and of all the absolute necessities of life, renders is very difficult for those officers who have families dependent upon them for support to get through the year without being in debt of the landlord, grocer, butcher, and tailor. This ought not to be. Men of character and respectability, who are competent and well qualified to discharge the duties incident to their office, ought to receive compensation adequate to their responsibility and the amount of duty performed. JUSTICE.

The New-Hampshire Republicans.

The call for the New-Hampshire Republican State Convention, to be held in Concord Jan. 14, is addressed to "all who supported U. S. Grant and Henry Wilson at the late elections; all who desire a firm, economical, and constitutional administration of national and State affairs; all who believe that 'honesty and efficiency rather than political activity' should be the essential qualification for the public service, and all who accept the settlement of the prominent issues 'that have divided political parties for the last ten years as just and final.'"

THE CURRENCY AND THE BANKS

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I read with interest and approval so much as you published of Mr. Clews' pamphlet concerning the legal reserve of national banks, and my decided opinion is that, unless the Currency act is amended in that especial, and in some other particulars, the system will be unable to bear the strain of a very severe money pressure. My convictions are all the deeper from the uninterrupted prosperity of the banks ever since the passage of that act, and from the unconcern of banks as to the dangers to which they are exposed from the fettered and crippled condition forced upon them by the inexorable terms of the Currency act. The fewer the shackles, the stronger the banks. After securing their circulation and its redemption at par in your City, banks should be allowed the most perfect freedom in every other respect for conducting a fair and legitimate business. But how is it with all our interior banks of small capitals? After securing their circulation, they have nothing left. They have parted with their real means, which they could loan out with safety, for the privilege of issuing their own paper promises to pay on demand in some other paper promises to pay on demand; the latter being so much the better, as they are made legal tender in the payment of debts. Banking on such a basis may be safe and profitable, so long as an easy money market and the confidence of the public prevent the return of their notes for redemption.

But this is not all in regard to banks who invest their whole capital in Government bonds for notes of circulation; for though the circulation is secured by Government bonds at considerably below their par value, and which are worth a premium over their par value; though bill-holders are preferred creditors, and there is a double liability of stockholders, yet, in the face of all this accumulation of security, a bank is obliged to lay aside fifteen per cent. from the funds of its depositors, as a legal reserve to still further secure bill-holders. This legal reserve, required from banks in our principal cities, is even more severe; it is twenty-five per cent.; and the aggregate amount pledged in United States bonds to secure the circulation amounts to near $400,000,000, without including the premium which the bonds are worth above their par value. This sum, vast though it be, is conceded to be necessary for the protection of the public. But it must be borne in mind that not one dollar of these pledged bonds are available for the redemption of their circulating notes until after the failure of a bank. The legal reserve on circulation, therefore, cannot by any conceivable possibility be needed to protect bill-holders, and is therefore crippling and damaging to banks, by locking up uselessly means which should be used to aid the business and industries of the country, and controlled for the defense of the banks.

But the banks are also obliged to keep a like percentage reserve on their deposits, which, with the reserve on their circulation, and the United States bonds pledged to secure it and Government deposits, and the premium which the bonds are worth above par, amount to more than one hundred and forty millions over and above the entire capital of all the national banks. This is not all; for the banks must necessarily keep a considerable reserve on hand beyond what the law compels, in order to meet the demands of daily business. Thus the national banks, with an aggregate capital of four hundred and eighty millions, have actually locked up more than six hundred and twenty millions, not a dollar of which is available to meet the redemption of their circulation or the payment of their deposits, even though a temporary use of a portion of this reserve would avert impending dangers to the public, and save the banks themselves from bankruptcy.

This statement is itself a demonstration of the glaring defects of the present system of national banking. It is weakness diluted, and to such a degree that this very feature assumes the character of original design, that thus in time the banks might be swept away and specie payments reached through their destruction. This is not merely a fanciful conjecture.

Banks were less a necessity of the rebellion than was the issue of legal tenders; and we all know the noble champion of their issue, and how willing he was to strike them from existence with his own parental hand.

But there is a growing opposition in the public mind to this system, from its danger as a monopoly of the money power of the nation. This feeling it will be wise in the banks to appease, by concessions to the public good, receiving in return compensating advantages.

Thus the surrender of their circulation for entire relief from legal reserves would be of great reciprocal benefit. It is not safe for banks to do business entirely upon credit. If any business requires a cash capital to carry it on, it is banking. The lenders of money should have money to loan. The preceding statement shows that banks would be gainers, in carrying out the above suggestion, more than $140,000,000 of available means, besides being relieved from exposure to pay on demand $382,000,000 of circulating notes. I know that Mr. Boutwell opposes this measure. He says:

"In discussing the other changes caused by the war, the issue of United States notes, and of notes by the national banks, should be considered together. Indeed, they are necessary parts of our financial system, and neither can be substituted for the other without general injury to the State bank system, and to any system of private banks, while the substitution of an equal amount of United States notes as currency would be productive of serious evils and losses."

But I think he is mistaken, for why should the two currencies be considered only in their duplex character? Their respective merits constitute their combined worth—and if one is good and the other bad, then let us have the good unmixed. It is clear that legal-tenders afford the best currency from their superior attributes—just because they are legal tenders and bank notes are not so. The State Bank system would not be disturbed at all by the substitution of legal tenders for bank notes.

We have in this State sixty-eight incorporated banks, with an aggregate capital of about $35,000,000 and $94,000,000 of deposits. Probably not one of them would make circulation under the national system if they were allowed to do so; for some of them have withdrawn from that system, while some few of the National Banks forego the privilege of issuing notes of circulation. Again Mr. Boutwell assumes another untenable position. He says:

"The National Banks hold nearly four hundred million United States bonds, which otherwise would be thrown upon the market, absorbing domestic capital, or, if purchased abroad, adding by the amount of interest to the annual balance against us in our account current with other countries."

These bonds pledged for circulation would not be thrown upon the market at home or abroad. The banks could not, if they would, and would not if they could, pay into the Treasury in money the amount of their circulation, and take up their bonds. This is too near an impossibility to be thought of. The Government would take back the bonds, and return the amount of bonds to the banks. Thus the Government would account of much of its debt, and secure the redemption of the bank circulation. Nor would the banks be likely to throw the fifty millions of returned bonds suddenly upon the market for they serve to exempt banks from a tax as much of their capitals, and are an available resource, would be likely to be retained for some pressing emergency. The banks save the tax upon their circulation, and would lose a tax on a corresponding amount of their capitals.

Thus the currency would be improved in quality, but the same in amount. The Government, by having the entire circulation, would be unopposed by the conflicting interests of banks in its measures for resuming specie payments. It will pay off and cancel $358,000,000 of its debt, if it takes that amount of bonds and thus lessen by $18,000,000 yearly the burdens of taxation. I have stated the circulation of banks as above. I suppose it really amounts to over $340,000,000.

To give full significance to this proposed measure, let it be received in all the importance and magnitude of its import and bearings.

Three hundred and thirty-three millions at six per cent. half-yearly compound interest for thirty-three years, would in that period pay off the whole interest-bearing debt of the United States.

Under such a measure of finance, who can estimate the jubilation of tax-payers, or the extent to which it would invigorate our industries and exalt the credit of the nation?

An Interesting Question of Practice in the Marine Court—Petition for a Writ of Prohibition.

An unusual question in regard to the law and the practice in the Marine Court was yesterday presented to the Supreme Court, Judge Leonard presiding, on the application of Martin L. Townsend, who appeared for the petitioner, Ferguson, and asked for an order to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue, commanding the Justices of the Marine Court to desist and refrain from any further proceedings in the action wherein the petitioner was plaintiff and John M. Jones was defendant. It appeared on the application for the writ, that an action was brought by Ferguson, in the Marine Court, against Jones. Issue was joined and a trial had before one of the Justices of that Court without a jury. The Justice ordered judgment for the defendant, which was duly entered in the proper form. The plaintiff then appealed from the judgment to the General Term, and a case was made and settled. Pending that appeal, the Justice before whom the case was tried entertained a motion upon his minutes to set aside the judgment and order a new trial, and, after argument, granted the motion vacating the judgment and ordering a new trial. The petitioner claimed that neither the law nor the practice authorized a Judge, before whom a case was tried without a jury, after judgment and pending an appeal, to entertain any such motion, a view in which Judge Leonard concurred, and the order asked for was granted. W. Gary Smith appeared for defendant Jones.

The Mission at Kit Burns' Rat-Pit—Fair for Aid of the Women's Home.

A bazaar was opened at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory yesterday for the benefit of the Home for Women, a mission that was opened three years ago in the once notorious rat-pit of Kit Burns, at No. 273 Water-street, under the superintendency of Rev. W. H. Boole. The fighting pit, once the resort of the vilest criminals, is now a chapel in charge of "Fred" Bell, formerly a "runner" and a prize-fighter, but now an earnest workman, whose labors among the vicious of Water-street are said to be productive of much good at this institution. A house is provided for abandoned women who desire to reform, and many philanthropic men and women gratuitously give their time to the good work of reformation, which is said to have been so successful that the building they now occupy is too small, and to raise money for a larger one the bazaar has been established through the efforts of Miss Julia A. Barker and others. Last evening the room presented a very pleasant appearance, notwithstanding the fact that many contributions have not yet arrived. The attendance was satisfactory. One of the tables is devoted to articles from California, mostly curious Chinese work. The Fair will only remain open until the 26th.

The Northern Pacific Railroad.

Gen. Geo. W. Cass, in recently accepting the Presidency of the Northern Pacific Railroad, made the following remarks before the Board of Directors:

GENTLEMEN: It is now about three months since you expressed your confidence in my devotion to the best interests of this corporation, and of my ability to serve it, by electing me to the most responsible position within your gift, at the early Presidency which was soon to become vacant. For this evidence of your appreciation I feel most gratefully; but the position I cannot accept with an unmixed feeling of gratitude. I accept it with doubt and hesitation, in view of its great responsibilities.

When the Board made its selection of a successor to the gentleman who created this great enterprise as it stands before the public today, I was by your appointment on a Committee to go to the Pacific coast, and afterward to Minnesota and Dakota, to make a personal examination of the road, its route, and its land grant, and to look into anything which concerned the Company's present and future. Before accepting or declining the trust you offered to me, I thought it to be fit—to be due to myself, to you, and to that small portion of the public that might place confidence in the enterprise by reason of my presiding over it—that I should first make this personal examination, and should on found my judgment of the ultimate value of the Northern Pacific Railroad and of its land grant.

That examination has been made, and my opinion of the property has been formed on the examination. And I come today to announce my acceptance of the honor and the office you have tendered to me, and to promise to devote to this enterprise all of my time, and whatever experience and judgment I have acquired in forty years of active business life, most of it spent in works of a character similar to the construction of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

In making a personal examination of the Road, the route, and the land grant to which I have referred, I was one of a Committee of a majority of your Board, and thus had the full advantage of observation from the various stand-points at which different minds and temperaments would naturally view so great a project, all aiding me to reach a more secure and sounder judgment.

In the journey we examined about one thousand miles of the route of your Road and of the lands contiguous. Of the line and the lands, more than one-half was on the Pacific coast. Of the constructed portion of the Road, we twice passed over four hundred miles, examining the whole of the property and the whole of the line, and miles of road by daylight, purposing to rely on what we saw, and not on what we heard, as to the route, the land, the property, and the probable future development of the enterprise.

It is not my purpose to go into an elaborate recital of the facts and of the theories on which I have based my opinion that the Northern Pacific Railroad can be constructed at a reasonable cost; that it can be operated and maintained at a less cost than any other railroad across the continent north of the parallel thirty-three, for very obvious reasons; and it will have, when constructed, and at once, a larger local traffic than any other road can have west of the one hundredth meridian of longitude; but I will say to you that such is my well-considered judgment.

I will also say that the vast country within the limits of your land is not equaled by any similar extent of country west of the Mississippi River, in all of the elements necessary to support an intelligent, enterprising, and prosperous population in the comforts and luxuries of life.

There is no problem to solve as to the success of the Northern Pacific Railroad after it shall have been constructed. The only question after that event will be how installment men of this age should ever have had a doubt about its success.

With these views, gentlemen, I enter upon the duties of the trust you have committed to me.

The Snow-Storm Yesterday.

Yesterday morning opened with a heavy fall of snow, which lasted until the afternoon, when a drizzling rain succeeded it. The streets on which two or three inches of snow had been were rapidly converted into a vast mud-puddle, and business out of doors was, as a natural consequence, almost entirely suspended. The street-cars did a thriving business, and scarcely any pedestrians could be seen on the side-streets, and but a few ladies were seen on Broadway. Mr. Henry Bergh, President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was on hand early, and finding several lines of street-railroads unprovided with snow scrapers, obliged them to stop their cars until the teams were doubled up. The mail service was minutely reported, and the teams carrying the mail to this City arrived on time.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AND NOTES.

The third episode of chamber-music given by Mr. Mills and Dr. Damrosch may be attended at Steinway Hall this evening. The instrumental pieces selected for recital are a suite by Goldmark, a trio by Beethoven, and a sonata, for piano and violin, by Schumann. Miss Jenny Hauk will be the vocalist. A concert, the programme of which consisted wholly of works by Herr Jean Vogt, a musician well known in Germany, took place at Steinway Hall, on Tuesday afternoon. Herr Vogt himself presided at the piano, to the detriment, we must say, of the effect of his compositions, which he rented altogether too noisily. A quintet for stringed instruments, capitally played by Dr. Damrosch, and Messrs. Matzka, Schwartz, Goffrid, and Bergner, was the most interesting incident of the performance.

Miscellaneous.

PROF. TYNDALL'S LECTURES.

The second of the series of lectures by Prof. Tyndall may be attended at Cooper Institute this evening. The high order of these entertainments, interesting as well as instructive, commends them to the public with exceptional force.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.

In the TIMES of the 8th inst. it was reported that Mr. Mortimer Wright, one of the company attached to the Academy of Music, Buffalo, had died of lockjaw, caused by wounds inflicted by Mr. J. B. Studley, during the bowie-knife fight in the drama of "Buffalo Bill." This report is unjust to Mr. Studley, as Mr. Wright died of black small-pox, and not from lockjaw, as erroneously stated in that report. The Health Physician of Buffalo certifies to this fact, which exonerates Mr. Studley from all blame in connection with Mr. Wright's death.

The Lesson of the Mutual Life Discussion.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have read the whole debate from proposition to conclusion, and the sum of the whole matter seems to be this:

That a majority of the Mutual Companies cannot afford to reduce their rates of insurance, while the one having the largest and longest experience believes that it can do so with safety and propriety. Indeed, the resolution of its Board, disposing of the matter for the present, declares: That while the past experience of the Company demonstrates its ability to carry out the plan of reduced premiums, "it directs, in compliance with the request of the other companies referred to, that the proposed reduction of rates be not carried into effect until the further action of the Board."

There is, then, delay only, not a total change of purpose. The Mutual Life may yet, and not long hence, we trust, will reduce their rates and furnish insurance at its worth.

Dividends are well enough in theory, but in practice their ever-changing character, and the misrepresentations and disappointments incidental to and springing out of them, or the failure of them, make the matter of dividends the disease of many, and the bane of most Mutual Companies.

The proposition of the Mutual Life of New-York was really a blow at the dividend delusion. It was an approximation to pure and simple and legitimate life insurance to the low rates of stock companies. It was a step in the right direction. It was a substantial indorsement of the premiums of such companies. The rates it intended to adopt for itself were only say half a dozen per cent. in excess of stock rates, and these stock rates, backed by the enormous capital of such companies as the NATIONAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY of the United States of America, has been previously unqualifiedly indorsed by Mr. Elisur Wright and Mr. Sheppard Homans, as sound and sufficient; and here I quote as appropriate from the report of the gentlemen and Mr. D. P. Fackler to the various Mutual Companies which requested the Mutual Life to reconsider its purpose:

"Mutual rates are designedly, and certainly ought to be, higher than the probable cost—the excess forms the capital."

And again: The reserves of the old policies are, in effect, to be used as a capital stock, to bear the expenses of getting new business at stock rates, which must considerably exceed the margins of the new premiums. The public will be glad to welcome the day of universally cheap insurance. The stock companies of the country are the only ones which can now give insurance at its cost. The National Life Insurance Company of the United States of America, chartered by Congress, (not the National of New-York, one of the Mutual companies objecting to the proposed reduction,) has a capital of $1,000,000, owned by such men as Jay Cooke, E. A. Rollins, John Sherman, Clarence H. Clark, and Wm. G. Moorehead.

The largest capital which has ever been pledged in any pure life company in America, to protect rates approved by the best actuarial talent of the country, of this Company, its rates, plans, &c., the special lesson of the last two weeks' discussion is highly commendatory.

Presentation of a Flag to the Seventy-Ninth Regiment.

The veterans of the old Seventh-ninth Regiment, New-York State Volunteers, last evening turned over the flag presented to them by the City of New-York during the war to the care of the Seventy-ninth Regiment, National Guard. The flag was presented by Brevet-Gen. David Morrison, who commanded the regiment during the war, and the presentation speech was made by Brevet-Capt. John A. Thompson, who lost his leg at Chancellorsville while carrying the colors. Capt. Laing received the flag, and responded on behalf of the Seventy-ninth Regiment, National Guard.

Holiday Gifts of Use and Elegance.

One of the most desirable and useful of all holiday gifts is a fine mantel clock, and to procure this in its greatest beauty and excellence, see at the new warerooms of the American Clock Company, No. 621 Broadway, opposite the Metropolitan Hotel. The high standard arrived at in this country in constructing implements for measuring time has in no direction been more decided than in the line of fine mantel clocks, as exhibited by Messrs. Seth Thomas' Sons & Co. They are not only invented as time-keepers, but are in conception, design, and construction highly creditable productions in the fine and industrial arts; making them fully equal in finish and beauty to the best French mantel clocks, and much their superior in recording time, and sold at lower prices. As the depot of the American Clock Company, as above, clocks of all sizes, kinds, and prices can be obtained in any quantity desired.—Evening Post.

There is a reason for this; and this when we consider that it is a first-class, perfect machine, capable of any class of work, good for twenty years' constant service, and selling $10 less than the other first-class machines. REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The following is a review of the business transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Wednesday, Dec. 18, which, although considerable in amount, independent of the parties interested, was of no particular importance to the general public; for all the sales contemplated were of a legal character, and the purchasers in each instance were the plaintiffs in the foreclosure suits. James M. Miller, under a Supreme Court order, R. C. Rosenzweig, sold a four-story brownstone front, French flat house and lot, letter 50 by 92, on the west side of Lexington-avenue, forty-nine feet north of Fifteenth-street, for $30 over and above a mortgage amounting to $22,000; total price, $22,700. Also, under the direction of the same parties, one lot, with building thereon about half finished, situate on the south side of East Sixty-sixth street, 25 feet east of Madison-avenue, 25 by 100.4 for $500 over and above mortgage and interest, amounting to $10,325; total price $11,025. The first-named property was bought by Christian Klein and the second by Thomas Stevenson. The same auctioneer also, under a Supreme Court order, Dennis M. Carpenter, Esq., referee, disposed of a lot, 20 by 50, with an unfinished three-story and basement Nova Scotia stone house thereon, located on the east side of Madison-avenue, 19.11 feet north of One Hundred and Thirty-second street, for, including incumbrances of $11,000, $11,025; the purchaser was S. T. Cushing, Esq. In addition to the above, Joseph McGuire, under a Supreme Court foreclosure decree, Charles Beeller, Esq., referee, sold a three-story and basement New-Brunswick stone front house and lot, situate on the west side of Madison-avenue, 19.11 feet north of One Hundred and Thirty-second-street, one lot $11,025 and the other lot $4,300; the purchaser in each case was Mr. Miller, the party in the last action. No further sales were made, the sale announced by A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co., under a Court order, of A store lot on the south side of East Eighty-second-street, 22.11 feet west of Third-avenue, being postponed indefinitely.

For today several auctions are noticed, one of which are of importance, particularly that by Messrs. Bell & Moller & Co. The real estate to be offered is as follows: By Muller, Wilkins & Co., at public auction, a valuable plot of ground, in size 47.8 by 102.2 feet, situate on the south side of Fifty-first street, 275 feet west of First-avenue and Thirty-sixth-street. By E. H. Ludlow & Co., at public auction, the desirable plot of ground, with three-story and cellar frame dwelling thereon, in rear, fronting on Thirty-first-street, and cellar brick building, 22 by 36, in rear, known as No. 17 Broome-street, south-east corner of Mangin-street, lot 25 by 72. By Joseph McGuire, at auction, the small tenement, Cedar-street, eight feet, lot 16 by 100, forming a plot in size 200 by 50.11, situate on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-eighth-street, 200 feet east of Tenth-avenue, and by Jere. Johnson, Jr., at his auctioneer's sale, a brown stone front house and lot on the south side of Norfolk-street, 125.6 feet south of Grand-street, 25 by 100.

At private contract, Wm. H. Rayner, No. 5½ Pine-street, sold a house and lot, having a frontage of 24.11 by 100 feet, on the east side of the Grand Boulevard, 424.5 feet south of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth-street, and two lots, each 25 by about 81 feet, 46 feet south of the above, for $6,000, cash. We also have learn that Hall J. Howe, No. 16 Pine-street, has recently sold the lot disposed of at the Exchange at auction some two weeks since by V. K. Stevenson & Brother, on the south-east corner of Madison-avenue and Nineteenth-street, (24 by 100 feet,) for $50,000, to Hon. Thomas J. Creamer. The price is the same mentioned at the auction. The lot is one of the best of the kind which remained as it is on sight, round, and for building purposes particularly desirable.

We are informed through several communications recently received that quite an extensive line of swindling operations is being carried on in Brooklyn houses, the modus operandi being as follows: A man representing himself through his card to be a real estate broker, calls upon the owner of a house on which he has seen the usual bill for sale, and that he has a "customer" for that particular house at the full price asked by the owner, and by other false representations obtains permission to show it to his "customer" with the owner's key. This unscrupulous rascal calls at once upon the owner, and without hesitation agrees to the price; but proving to be a man of sense, and unable to pay anything to bind the contract, he tells the owner he will bring the broker then presents to the owner a bill for commissions, amounting generally to one per cent on the valuation of the property, which the owner, under thirty odd dollars, reluctantly pays. This whole thing is a systematic fraud, and one deserving the severest punishment. Owners of property, especially at the season of the year, when new contracts are to be made, cannot be too careful in the choice of those to whom they entrust their interests, and in selecting a broker to transact their business, should rely only upon those of established integrity and reputation.

HORACE GREELEY'S WILLS.

Further Interesting Proceedings Before the Surrogate's Court.

Miss Ida Greeley Divides the Property with Her Sister—Mr. Greeley's Last Moments Described.

At the opening of the Surrogate's Court of Westchester County yesterday morning, the proceedings in the matter of proving the last will and testament of the late Mr. Greeley, as written and signed by himself on the 9th day of November last, and executed on the evening of the 12th ult., a short time before his death, were resumed, in behalf of the proponents, by calling to the stand Mr. Reginald Hart, No. 38 Park-row, New-York, who testified as follows:

I reside at Mount Kisco, Westchester County; I was acquainted with Horace Greeley during his lifetime; am familiar with his handwriting; the paper shown me (being will dated Nov. 9, 1872,) is in Horace Greeley's handwriting, including the signature; I am one of the subscribing witnesses to that instrument; it was executed on the 12th day of November last, at the house of Dr. Choate; Miss Lampson was the other subscribing witness; it was signed by myself and Miss Lampson, in the presence of each other; it was between five and six o'clock in the afternoon when I first saw the will there; I reached the house of Dr. Choate about five o'clock on that day; I was let into the house by Mr. Stuart (the testator's son-in-law); I saw Mr. Stuart; there were several other persons at the house whom I do not now recollect; I saw Miss Ida Greeley, and I told her I wished to see if Mr. Greeley was able to execute the will; I went into the room with Mr. Stuart and Miss Ida Greeley; Mr. Stuart asked Mr. Greeley if he knew me; Mr. Greeley opened his eyes and said yes; Mr. Stuart was sitting on the bed; Mr. Greeley was in bed; Mr. Stuart held up my hand before Mr. Greeley and asked him if he acknowledged that to be his last will and testament; at first he said no; I then said, "It is the will you signed, Mr. Greeley;" he then said yes; I then asked Mr. Greeley if Mr. Hart should witness the will, and he said yes; he next asked if Mr. Haines should witness the will, and he said no; he then said, "John B. Haynes;" I then asked if Mr. Haynes should witness the will, and he said no; Mr. Stuart then asked him if he would have Aunty Lampson for a witness and he said yes; Aunty Lampson and myself took the will to the dining-room, and Aunty Lampson signed it there in each other's presence; I think the parlor stood from eight to ten feet from the bed.

Q.—From what you saw and heard on that occasion, did Mr. Greeley seem to understand what he was doing? A.—As clearly as possible to my mind.

Cross-examined by Mr. Williams.—While I was in the room with Mr. Greeley, Mr. Reid came in; he walked up to the bed side; Mr. Stuart asked Mr. Greeley if he knew Mr. Reid, and he said yes, and put his hand out and shook hands with Mr. Reid quite warmly, so warmly as to attract my attention; Mr. Reid said, "I thought you would be so, Mr. Greeley; I have done any good;" Mr. Greeley looked pleased; Mr. Reid asked him if he was in pain, and Mr. Greeley replied yes; I remained in the room about fifteen minutes; Mr. Stuart, Miss Ida Greeley and I remained in the room all the time with me; I think Mr. Reid remained there after I left the room; I think some one asked me what I thought Mr. Greeley's condition was for an hour and a half; I said I knew he was as bright as I was; I think Dr. Choate asked me whether the will had been executed, and I told him that it had; I think I knew the fact that Dr. Choate had made the treatment of insanity a specialty.

The following is a release from the brother and sisters of Mr. Greeley to Misses Ida L. and Gabrielle, of which the following substances the essential points, was offered by the proponents and placed on file, to wit:

We particularly hereby release or discharge any claim or right which we or either of us may have under any will in any name or form of Horace Greeley, and stipulate and agree not to contest the will of said Horace Greeley made on the 28th day of November, 1872, and we hereby consent that the same may be proved by the witnesses in Westchester County, N. Y., and we renounce all right or interest under any will of said Horace Greeley.

NATHAN F. GREELEY,
ARIANDNE GREELEY,
BETHER GREELEY CLEVELAND,
MARY B. GREELEY.

The proponents here proposed to rest their case for the present, whereupon Mr. Williams, counsel for contestants, rose and contended that the testimony adduced was not such as to call upon the contestants or opponents in his judgment the will was not entitled to probate.

Surrogate Coffin remarked that the proponents had probably made out a prima-facie case.

Judge Hart said that they had other witnesses to produce at the proper time.

Mr. Williams contended that the proponents were bound to produce all their testimony at once; that they must exhaust their evidence, and referred to the Parrish will case in support of that view.

The Surrogate said no—that the proponents have proved a prima-facie case, and there rest; that the contestants assail that position, and I must allow them to call witnesses to maintain their position.

Wm. E. Robinson was then called and examined for the contestants. He deposed as follows:

I am a counselor-at-law, and have been such for fifteen or twenty years; I knew Mr. Greeley for thirty-four years; I drew up a will; it was executed by Horace Greeley.

Mr. Robinson here produced a will dated Sept. 21, 1871, but its reading was objected to by Mr. Nelson. Mr. Williams stated that his object in producing it was to show that the last will was not in harmony with Mr. Greeley's well-known expressed wishes.

It was ordered on file without being read. It had been in possession of witness ever since its execution.

George P. Nelson, counsel of Miss Gabrielle Miriam Greeley, examined by Mr. Williams.

Q.—Have you in your possession a paper purporting to be a deed from Miss Ida Greeley to her sister Gabrielle? A.—I have.

Mr. WILLIAMS—Will you produce it? A.—Not unless I am so directed by the Surrogate.

At the suggestion of the Surrogate the deed was produced and declared to be considered as evidence in the case.

The following is a copy of the deed in question:

DEED FROM IDA L. TO GABRIELLE M. GREELEY.

Whereas, Horace Greeley, late of the town of New-Castle, State of New-York, County of Westchester, by his last will and testament, dated the 9th day of November, 1872, gave and bequeathed all the property of which he died possessed, including lands, money, shares, bonds, notes, all bank, above expressed, and obligations, to the sister daughter, Ida L. Greeley, one-half to be by her used at her own discretion in the education and support of her sister Gabrielle, the other one-half to be her own property; and

And whereas, the said Ida L. wishes to avoid all questions respecting the true intent, meaning, and effect of said will, and also wishes to show a proper regard for said Horace Greeley's memory, and to perform her duty toward her sister Gabrielle in respect to her education; Now I, the said Ida L. Greeley, of the town of New-Castle aforesaid, in consideration of the premises, and of my affection, and of one dollar to me in hand paid by Gabrielle M. Greeley, of the same place, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have bargained, sold, and quit-claimed, and by these presents do release, sell, and quit-claim unto the said Gabrielle, her heirs and assigns forever, all the one-undivided half of all the property, real and personal, that is given and bequeathed by said last will and testament, so that the said Gabrielle and Ida, shall be equal beneficiaries under said will, with this reservation and exception, that until the said Gabrielle arrives at the age of twenty-one years, said Ida shall use her discretion in the education and support of said Gabrielle as is contemplated by said will, and shall appropriate so much of the property hereby transferred to said Gabrielle as may be necessary for said purpose; and with said last reservation and exception that should she said Ida deem it advantageous to sell and dispose of any of the real estate hereby transferred to said Gabrielle, Horace and Gabrielle, she may do so at any time, as she may, with the written consent of said Gabrielle, though she be an infant, do so, and give good conveyance therefor, and add the proceeds thereof to the personal property hereby transferred to said Gabrielle.

And the said Ida covenants, promises, and agrees to and with the said Gabrielle, that she, the said Ida, has not done, committed, or suffered any act or thing whereby the above property, or any part thereof, or any in, or hereafter may be impeached, charged, or encumbered. And the said Ida also covenants, promises, and agrees to, and with said Gabrielle, at any time within one year after said Gabrielle arrives at the age of twenty-one years, upon the reasonable request and at the proper cost and charges of said Gabrielle, that she, the said Ida, will make, do, and execute, or cause to be made, done, and executed, every such further and other lawful and reasonable act, conveyance, and assurance in the law for the better and more effectually vesting and confirming the property hereby sold and transferred, or intended to be, in and to the said Gabrielle, her heirs and assigns forever, as by the said Gabrielle, her heirs, and assigns forever, or her counsel learned in the law, shall be reasonably advised or required.

In witness whereof, she said Ida has hereunto set her hand and seal, this 15th day of December, 1872.

IDA L. GREELEY.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of Reginald Hart.

Robert Barnum Greeley, a brother of the late Horace Greeley, after testifying in relation to the manner in which the farm occupied by him became the joint property of himself and his late brother, expressed his gratitude for the share in the property left for the benefit of his mother. He also stated that he had received thousands of dollars from his brother without any consideration therefor. He further testified to the existence of a will of Horace Greeley had executed in his sisters, Arminda Greeley and Mary Bush Greeley.

Thomas A. Booker, examined: I have resided in Brooklyn since 1861; I entered the Tribune office on the first issue as a compositor, and subsequently became of the composing-room, which position I occupy at the present time; I have been in almost daily intercourse with Mr. Greeley; he has visited my house and my house has visited his; I have been ill generally; I was the first person approached to found the Typographical Association, and was exceedingly intimate with Mr. Greeley; at about the time Age I protested to Mr. Greeley against his selling any more whisky to the Association; he promised me that he was selling a share to pay of a debt, but that it was the last time he would put his hand to it; I gave the way of indorsing his notes; I was at the Tribune when Mr. Greeley died, and observed that Mr. Greeley did not appear to be the man I had known so long; he looked as though he did not know where he was, and as though he was in a dream; I saw Mr. Greeley twice on the 12th of November, in his room at the Tribune office; I went upstairs to his room to greet him; he seemed to be asleep in his chair; Mr. Cleveland was there, and I remarked to Mr. Cleveland that as Mr. Greeley appeared to be asleep, I would not disturb him, and started to leave, but as I was going downstairs Mr. Greeley said, "Booker, I want to see you;" I then went upstairs; Mr. Greeley said, "I feel a little more easy, I think I can sleep again;" he said, "I am ruined; we are all ruined; we are all broken up; you have got some property, haven't you, Booker?" I said, "Some;" "Will you take care of my children for me?" I promised him that I would do so; I then said to him, "I wish you would go home with me; you will go home with me and stay there where you belong; you will sleep and feel better," but he declared that he could not do so; he declared that he could not write what he desired; he had been trying to write something about his business affairs, but was unable; Mr. Reid came in and I told him that Mr. Greeley was unable to write, and he remarked that it had been attended to; while I was urging Mr. Greeley to go with me to my house a friend called, and occupied his mind for a while; I wanted him to go with me, and have a talk about old times in order to cheer up his spirits, but he would not give me any answer; finally I induced him to consent, and I helped him over when he came downstairs; he walked down to the door and sat down on the sofa and slept a short time; he then called me and I went to him, but instead of talking he dropped off again into a kind of stupor; I tried to get him engaged in conversation to cheer him up; he found a poem and read it, and then asked me if Bother I had read one entitled "The Raven" to add it was the most awful book he had ever read; but did not say in what respect; he appeared to be perfectly familiar with its contents; about half past nine P. M. he appeared tired and sleepy, and retired; when I got up early next morning, I found Mr. Greeley up reading the Tribune; he remained with us for breakfast; he manifested a desire to get over to the city; I proposed to accompany him in a carriage for him, but he said "No," will take the cars;" after crossing the ferry we took a Brooklyn street car and ride to the office; when I saw him at the office Nov. 11 I thought his mind was unsound; I made up my mind as to what was the matter with him; when he crossed the ferry a great many people looked at him; he looked vacant, as though he did not know where he was; I did not see him again until Wednesday evening following; I then saw him at Mr. Sinclair's house; there was to be a meeting of stockholders at Mr. Sinclair's about Mr. Greeley's affairs; many of the stockholders supported great displeasure toward him; he jumped up from the sofa where he had been lying; I think he was more dependent then than I had ever seen him; he made exclamations to the effect that he had ruined himself and his friends; that he had committed acts that were disreputable; that day he said that he was ruined; that he had been blackballed, and would be sent to state Prison; he left no doubt on my mind that he was insane; Mr. Greeley was rational at times; the great point of his delusion was that he was ruined; that he had ruined the Tribune Association and his own personal estate, and everybody; the aspect of his countenance was sad, and he had a very vacant look; his face appeared sharp and haggard; he had not the look that he had lost sleep to the extent of twenty pounds.

Cross-examined by Mr. Nelson.—Mr. Greeley would stand and gaze about him in a stupid manner as though he was lost; he was ill after the first battle of Bull Run.

Q.—Did not Mr. Greeley often act strange, abstracted and lost? A.—He would look strange when people called him a fool; he would write and talk in such a way that a stranger would be apt to think he was strange and peculiar; on the 11th of November last he showed the first symptom of what I thought was strange and irrational; I was at his house room, at the Tribune office, about two o'clock; I was in his room again in about half an hour; he then said he was ruined; he also said to me, "I have proposed to have you take care of my children;" I told him that I would do so if it took all the money I had; he spoke about being unable to write—that every thing was gone; he said he was completely ruined, and wanted me to pledge myself that I would take care of his children; he had recently lost his wife; I do not know that he had met with any pecuniary loss; Mr. Wade Hutchinson and Mr. Morris came and tried to get him away; he did not say how he was ruined; he said nothing about the mission; I have stated all the grounds upon which I base my opinion as to the insanity of Mr. Greeley; my impression of his mind; when he spoke to me about being ruined, I told him that it was all nonsense—that his was not ruined at all; I tried to hearer him to fight on his feet; he said he had lost his feet; complicating the fortune in having set fire to his premises.

THE LIFE INSURANCE WAR

THE

National Life Ins. Co.

OF THE

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Issues all approved forms of policies upon rates of premium about TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT. less than the rates charged by the high premium Mutual Companies. It guarantees the sufficiency of these rates by

A PAID-UP CAPITAL OF ONE MILLION DOLLARS.

The rates of the NATIONAL, sustained as they are by the large capital, have been officially indorsed by ELIZUR WRIGHT, Actuary, "AS BEING HIGH ENOUGH FOR BOTH SAFETY AND PROFIT;" and by SHEPPARD HOMANS, Actuary, "AS BEING ADJUSTED UPON A SAFE AND EQUITABLE BASIS."

The recent action of the Trustees of the MUTUAL LIFE of New-York, in proposing to reduce their rates to approximate those of the NATIONAL, was an indorsement by that Company of the sufficiency of these premiums, and an acknowledgment that the LOW-RATE PLAN IS BETTER, CHEAPER, and more desirable than the HIGH PREMIUM MUTUAL PLAN.

The protests of many of the Mutual Companies against the reduction of rates proposed by the MUTUAL LIFE OF NEW-YORK, but now abandoned in deference to their wishes, is an acknowledgment that these companies cannot furnish insurance at so low a rate as a Stock Company with a large capital can, and does, with perfect safety.

THE NATIONAL LIVE INSURANCE COMPANY OF THE UNITED STATES

Furnishes insurance upon low rates, with perfect security, with no divided dividends, no disappointments, and no possibility of unpaid premiums.

INSURE IN THE NATIONAL,

Where you can get better insurance, and at a less price, than in any high premium Mutual Company, and where you know what you are purchasing and what price you are paying. This Company was chartered by Congress in 1868, has issued about nineteen thousand policies, and has the largest capital of any Life Insurance Company in the country.
